FUND COMMENTARY

Asian markets were weak in April on the uncertainty concerning the Ukrainian/Russian war, with the increasing possibility of it becoming longer term. This is likely to further disrupt the supply of energy and materials, thereby pressuring inflation. Uncertainty was also caused by the continued expansion of China's zero Covid policy, leading to renewed weakness in Chinese equities, while Taiwan fell on risks of increased supply chain disruptions.

The Q1'22 results for most of our portfolio holdings were satisfactory, although in many cases this was not enough to offset weak sentiment. For example, TSMC reported a rise of 45% year-on-year (y/y) in net profit, surpassing expectations, but the stock fell on concerns over the pricing cycle and future demand.

The Chinese Cyberspace Administration announced that it will begin inspections focusing on the abuse of algorithms. This, combined with sluggish Q4'21 results, impacted Tencent. The company's results saw revenue growth of 8% on weaker advertising, while operating profits fell on a higher level of investment and a mix shift to lower margin businesses. The gaming business remains in a relatively healthy position despite the continued suspension of new game approvals.

In Korea, advertising agency Cheil Worldwide reported strong results. The company's operating profits rose 42% y/y in Q1 driven by strength in its US business, pushing margins to multi-year highs. Importantly, the outlook remains strong with management maintaining its double-digit growth target for the year. Similarly, LG Chem's first quarter results beat expectations and demonstrated the company's ability to pass through higher input costs to its customers. The order backlog for its battery division expanded to $230bn as automotive clients prepare for more electric vehicle launches.

In India, Bandhan Bank performed well. The leading micro-credit player gave an update on the latest environment and indicated that loan growth remained healthy while collections were improving.
