

Fund Description

The Fund aims to achieve capital appreciation through a computer-based trading approach that uses mathematical models designed by the investment manager that seek to profit from opportunities in a wide array of liquid markets. These models use price and non-price data to forecast the future price movements of selected instruments and to estimate the associated risk. The models then determine how best to invest in each of these instruments, with the aim of making a profit after transaction costs are considered. The models are overseen by the investment manager and are intended to systematically adapt over time to capture potential structural or regime changes in the markets. The Fund's investments are spread across many different sectors and instruments. The Fund's investments may include: foreign currency spot and forwards; exchange-traded futures linked to equity, bond, and short term interest rate markets; eligible securities linked to commodities; and other liquid instruments including exchange-traded funds, equity securities and swaps. The Fund will seek to manage surplus cash with the objective of maintaining a high level of liquidity and preserving the capital of cash investments. The Fund is actively managed, and is not managed in reference to a benchmark.

There can be no assurance that the investment objective of the Fund will be achieved and investment results may vary substantially over time. Investments in the Fund places an investor's capital at risk. The price and value of investments may fluctuate and investors may lose all or a substantial portion of their investment. Past performance is not indicative of future results.

Monthly Commentary

The Fund was profitable in April largely due to gains from short interest rate futures positions, although trading of stock index futures and currency forwards were modestly profitable as well. Trading of commodity futures was slightly unprofitable as losses from trading metal futures outdistanced the gain from trading soft commodity futures. Trading of energy, grain and livestock futures were each nearly flat.

Unexpectedly strong, sticky and broadening inflation readings during the first three months of 2024, and continued resilience in economic activity, employment and wages in the U.S. has prompted investors to push back their expectations of interest rate cuts around the world, as the US Federal Reserve's battle with price pressures complicates other central banks' loosening plans. Short positions in U.S., German, French, Italian, British, Canadian and Australian interest rate futures were broadly profitable.

Equity markets were volatile in April. Concerns that previously expected official interest rate reductions would be delayed and reduced weighed on equity markets for most of the month. Still, equities drew some support from signs of better growth prospect in Europe and China as well as continuing technology optimism. Results were mixed but fractionally profitable overall. Trading of U.S. stock index futures was profitable, with short positions posting profits early in the month and long positions garnering gains later in April. Long positions in the EURO STOXX, Singaporean, Taiwanese, and Hong Kong equity index futures were profitable too. On the other hand, long positions in Japanese, British, French and Australian stock index futures registered partially offsetting losses.

Currency markets were heavily influenced by the changing interest rate outlook globally. Long U.S. dollar positions against the low-yield Japanese yen and, to a lesser extent, several other currencies, were profitable. Indeed, the yen's sharp fall prompted reported intervention by the Bank of Japan. On the other hand, trading the dollar relative to the Brazilian real and Swiss franc produced small, partially offsetting losses.

A long Arabica coffee position was profitable as prices remained elevated due to concerns over potential damage to coffee crops in Brazil's growing regions as the result of heavy rainfall. The price of Robusta coffee was also higher as drought conditions in Vietnam portend a sharp decline in production and exports for the 2023/2024 period. Sugar prices declined due to expectations of robust supply from Brazil, the leading exporter globally. This better supply outlook for Brazil has offset concerns about shortages in Asia, particularly in countries like India and Thailand. Consequently, a short sugar trade was profitable.

Metal prices were influenced by conflicting forces in April. U.S. and U.K. sanctions that ban the trading of new Russian metals supplies, worries about the long-term availability of metals needed for the energy transition, concerns about short-term metal supplies due to several mine closures, incipient signs of improving growth in Europe, and safe haven demand for precious metals pushed prices higher. On the other hand, high-for-longer interest rates and worries about the sustainability of China's industrial rebound restrained metal prices. Overall, short silver, copper and aluminum trades were unprofitable.

Geopolitical frictions in the Middle East continued to underpin energy prices during much of April, but some easing of tensions between Israel and Iran combined with hopes of a possible Gaza ceasefire caused prices to fall sharply late in the month. On balance, the gains from long Brent and WTI crude positions slightly outdistanced losses from trading of crude oil products and carbon emissions.

Trading of grain and livestock futures was marginally unprofitable too.

Risk Considerations

The risk category has been calculated based upon simulation of the Fund's performance using historical data, which may not be a reliable indicator of the Fund's future risk profile. The risk category shown is not guaranteed and may change over time. The lowest category (category 1) does not mean that the investment is risk-free.

The Fund is rated 6 due to the nature of its investments which include the following risks:

- Equity risk : The risk that the value of equities and equity-related securities within the Fund may be affected by stock market movements
- Interest rate risk : The risk that the investment's value may change due to uncertain future interest rates.
- Currency risk : The risk that the investment's value may change due to fluctuations in exchange rates between currencies
- Derivatives risk : The Fund may use derivatives for investment purposes. Derivatives are highly sensitive to changes in the value of the asset on which they are based, which may result in greater fluctuations in the value of the Fund. The impact to the Fund can be greater where derivatives are used in an extensive or complex way.
- Commodity risk : the commodities market has shown sharp variations, both up and down and commodities are generally considered to be high risk investments. The Fund's investments can therefore experience significant fluctuations
- Model risk : The Fund uses quantitative models in order to make investment decisions. As market dynamics shift over time, a quantitative model may become less efficient or may even present deficiencies under certain market conditions. This may lead to substantial losses

The following are additional risks which are not captured in the risk category:

- Counterparty risk : The risk that the other party to a transaction with the Fund may fail to fulfil its contractual obligations and may expose the Fund to financial losses.
- Investment risks: A prospective investor should appreciate that the value of any investment, and any income from any investment, may go down as well as up and that an investor's capital is at risk and the investor may not receive back the amount invested. Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results.

Your investment is not guaranteed and its value can go down as well as up. For more information about risk, please see the 'Risk Factors' section of the prospectus, which is available at www.lumyna.com.
