Market Review

The first quarter of 2024 saw political theatrics across Global Developed markets and more handwringing about shaky economic data. Tensions in the Red Sea also dominated headlines, raising geopolitical fears and further hitting economic sentiment. While economic data did remain mixed, overall, the fundamentals supporting this bull market remain intact, in our view.

In Japan, weak economic data contrasted with the Nikkei's much-celebrated return to bubble-era 1989 highs. GDP fell for the second straight quarter in Q4, with domestic demand notching its third sequential decline. Yet the weakness was largely in line with expectations and the rest of the world's history of taking a bit of a breather after an initial surge from reopening, and the rate of contraction slowed significantly in Q4 (from -0.8% q/q to -0.1%). A growing world should help pull Japan along, with growth elsewhere in Asia helping Japan in particular.

On the monetary policy front, the Bank of Japan (BoJ) generated headlines in March when it raised its benchmark rate from -0.10% to between 0% and 0.10%, ending eight years of negative interest rates. Officials also ended the Yield Curve Control program, which capped 10-year Japanese Government Bond yields at 1.0%, though the BoJ will continue its ¥6 trillion in monthly bond purchases. Overall, we view this as a small but beneficial step toward more normal policy. Negative rates caused many distortions in the market, and banks have long decried their impact on profitability—especially with long rates capped. However, the continued quantitative easing bond purchases mean market forces still don't have full control over Japan's yield curve, which remains rather flat. Additionally, the moves did nothing to lift the Yen, which remains near generational lows, prompting policymakers to speak persuasively about currency market interventions.

While a weak Yen is not inherently bad for Japan's economy, it does create winners and losers, which was on full display in February's trade data. Export values rose 7.8% y/y, inspiring widespread cheer. But this swift growth was a figment of currency translation. Export volumes, which strip out the Yen's impact, fell -1.5%. This disconnect shows Japan's large multinationals continue reaping profits from converting export revenue back into Yen, but they aren't gaining market share. Additionally, the weak Yen raises import costs, adding headwinds for businesses sourcing parts, resources and labour overseas. At the same time, intervention adds risks of its own, making this an area to watch.

In Europe and the UK, another spate of weak GDP results heightened the conversation about the region's structural headwinds. Britain, with two consecutive GDP declines through Q4 2023—albeit very shallow ones—now meets one popular recession definition, although the Office for National Statistics and Bank of England are reserving judgment about whether the label applies. Germany also contracted in Q4, cementing a slight full-year decline of -0.1%, while France flatlined in Q3 before growing a revised 0.1% q/q in Q4. Spain and Italy grew 0.6% q/q and 0.2%, respectively, but wide dispersion among member states left full eurozone GDP growth flat following Q3's -0.1% dip.

Most of the economic discussion focused not on cyclical headwinds, but long-running structural issues. In Britain, these include the generational high in taxes relative to GDP, falling per-capita output, weak productivity, limited reform prospects and supposedly weak investment incentives. Europe's list of perceived drawbacks includes high taxes and weak investment as well, along with high energy costs, hamstrung public investment and regulatory hurdles to restructuring and other pro-growth initiatives. While aspects of these critiques may have some merit, they miss the simple point that structural factors get priced in and reduce expectations, making it easier for a small cyclical upturn to deliver positive surprise.

Meanwhile, there are some positive factors hinting at such an upturn. The UK's March composite and services flash purchasing managers' indices (PMIs) for the UK remained over 50, signalling expansion and more than offsetting the continued manufacturing contraction. Eurozone PMIs were weaker, with Germany and France still registering contraction in both services and manufacturing, but survey provider S&P Global said growth elsewhere in the eurozone was enough to lift the bloc's composite reading to 49.9—barely in contraction.

The Swiss National Bank (SNB) became the first major central bank to cut rates in this cycle. The move got a lot of attention, with many arguing it raises the likelihood the Bank of England and European Central Bank will cut soon and perhaps even before the US Fed does so. While possible, it is important to understand that the SNB based its decision on conditions within Switzerland, where CPI inflation was never close to the highs seen elsewhere and slowed to just 1.2% y/y in February. This is significantly lower than the UK and eurozone, and it remains far from clear how monetary authorities in either place will interpret incoming data over the next few months and apply those interpretations to interest rate decisions. While groupthink does afflict central banks globally, one central banks' moves cannot be predicted from another's, especially when there are so many differences. As we frequently say, it remains wisest to assess decisions as central bankers make them—not to waste time predicting them, especially since they have no preset market impact.

Elsewhere in Europe, Portugal's election yielded a hung Parliament, with the centre-right Democratic Alliance (AD) winning a narrow plurality. Party leader Luís Montenegro became prime minister once all overseas votes were tallied, and at month's end he was nearing an agreement to form a minority government with the Socialists backing key legislation. This effort passed its first test late in the month, when Montenegro and the Socialists agreed to split the Speaker position into two two-year terms, with each party's preferred candidate taking one. While this ends the government formation process in relatively uneventful fashion, few expect the new government to have much staying power, and 2025's budget is already looking to face tough opposition. The upshot here is continued gridlock—keeping debt crisis-era reforms intact and legislative risk low.

Spain is also experiencing political gridlock, which intensified in March. The coalition government led by Prime Minister Pedro Sánchez did pass a rewritten amnesty deal for Catalan separatists, which had stalled earlier this year. Theoretically, this should have cleared the way to focus on the Budget and other key legislation. But as the amnesty deal neared passage, Catalonia's regional government called a snap election, forcing PM Sánchez to cancel fiscal policy negotiations and extend 2023's Budget instead. While this extends the status quo, it also preserves uncertainty over the financial and energy sector windfall taxes, which the government had pledged to make permanent in the upcoming Budget. The taxes haven't proven to be a huge roadblock for Spanish equities, but businesses would likely benefit from clarity on their future either way.

US equities rose in Q1 even as financial headlines featured various stale and widely watched worries—helping keep sentiment in check and setting up positive surprise. With broad sentiment still quite sceptical, we see plenty of "wall of worry" for this bull market to climb.

Tragedy struck late in the quarter, as a cargo ship experiencing systems failure collided with Baltimore's Francis Scott Key Bridge. First and foremost: We sympathize with those affected by the disaster and the tragic loss of life. The human cost is devastating. However economically, headlines emphasizing the disaster's impact on supply chains seem overwrought to us. The Port of Baltimore is large and important—especially given its critical role in auto shipments, farm and construction machinery and US coal exports. Yet we think this is a case of commentators fighting the last war, with COVID-era supply chain snarls still fresh in society's collective memory.

The actual economic impact looks muted. Shipments—including those of major automakers—have re-routed to alternate East and West coast ports. At the Port itself, debris removal is underway and crews have cleared emergency channels to allow essential vehicles' passage—with more, deeper channels in the works. While the local impact may be big, the national effects should prove minimal.

Presidential election campaigning was in full swing throughout Q1, with political posturing and histrionics across the ideological spectrum. President Biden paused the permit review process for new Liquefied Natural Gas export terminals in January, citing a need to reassess permitting due to climate change effects. The move is likely to have little market impact in the shorter term, given ample supply and five new, previously approved terminals coming online soon, which aren't affected by the order. Longer term is an open question. However, this looks like politicking to us, similar to the administration's prior temporary pauses on issuing oil leases on federal lands.

In March, despite endless questions over former President Donald Trump's legal and financial issues as well as President Joe Biden's age, the two officially became the presumptive presidential nominees, winning enough delegates to clinch their respective parties' nominations. Hence, speculation over the candidates' potential policies—with particular focus on tax policy implications—commenced.

Most attention centred on the individual tax cuts passed via 2017's Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (TCJA), which are set to expire in 2025 unless Congress extends them. If that doesn't happen, the pre-2017 status quo will return—but with inflation adjustments to pre-2017 tax band thresholds, which injects some uncertainty. So, many wonder how a Trump or Biden win might affect the TCJA's extension, or lack thereof—and what the effects on equities may be. We think such speculation is overblown. History reveals tax changes have no pre-set economic or market impact. They play out too slowly and are too widely watched to pack any surprise power. Besides, taxes are just one factor among many impacting personal disposable income and corporate cash flows.

Furthermore, the president doesn't dictate tax policy—that is Congress's purview. Here, gridlock reigns, with more materializing in March. Republicans' already slim 219 – 213 majority narrowed further, as Republican Representatives Ken Buck (Colorado) exited and Mike Gallagher (Wisconsin) announced he will resign on April 19—slimming the GOP's House majority to 217 – 213 and increasing the likelihood of little, or largely watered down legislation passing. One exception to gridlock's reality was policymakers' averting a government shutdown this month (albeit technically after the deadline to reach a funding deal).

Elsewhere in US politics, Independent candidate Robert F. Kennedy, Jr. named Nicole Shanahan—a California lawyer deeply engrained within Silicon Valley Tech culture—as his presidential running mate. It remains to be seen how this choice affects his support and whether he is likelier to siphon votes from a Democratic or Republican candidate, though Shanahan's historic Democratic ties may play a role here. And, sadly, former Senator Joe Lieberman passed away—casting more doubt on the future of the centrist "No Labels" party. Clearly, there are potential wild cards, but these are thus far playing out as third-party bids typically do.

Finally in politics, Republican Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell announced he will step down as party leader—though not retire from the Senate. People often dwell on such leadership changes, but equities care more about the balance of power than the personalities wielding it. Now, gridlock reigns despite Senate Leader McConnell's announcement—a bullish feature, given gridlock reduces the likelihood of sweeping legislation creating winners and losers, which typically disincentivizes investment.

Meanwhile, economic data contained silver linings many overlooked—setting up positive surprise. On the inflation front, February's consumer price index and personal consumption expenditures price index (CPI and PCE, respectively) both ticked up slightly on a yearly basis. CPI accelerated to 3.2% y/y versus January's 3.1%, while February PCE inflation came in at 2.5% versus January's 2.4%. CPI ticked up on a monthly basis, too—to 0.4% m/m (versus January's 0.3%)—while PCE inflation cooled slightly, to 0.3% (versus January's 0.4%). That said, February's minor move doesn't reveal any change in the longer-term cooldown.

Other data similarly show the positive backdrop continuing. S&P Global and ISM's February manufacturing PMIs diverged—with the former's 52.2 reading implying expanding business activity and the latter's 47.8 implying contraction. Yet both noted businesses' restocking inventories—a likely small economic tailwind. Plus, S&P and ISM's services PMIs—52.3 and 52.6, respectively—found the more economically significant services sector continuing its long-term trend of expansion. Then, too, The Conference Board's LEI flipped positive for the first time since December 2021, at 0.1% m/m. While this is just one month of data from a faulty gauge (it overrates manufacturing's GDP contribution), it may be a small sentiment boost.

February's existing home sales rose 9.5% m/m—yet remain historically low amid still-elevated mortgage rates and tight supply (just 2.9 months of inventory, near record lows). Conversely, new home sales fell slightly (-0.3% m/m) but remain up longer term. More new home construction underpins their 8.4 months of supply (a bit below historic highs) and likely provides a small GDP boost as a small headwind flips to slight tailwind.

Regional bank worries resurged briefly. Such fears were widely overhyped, based on one-offs including New York Community Bancorp's (NYCB) Q4 earnings miss and its CEO's month-end departure announcement. Yet given NYCB's troubles stem in large part from its takeover of Signature Bank last year as well as its exposure to Manhattan's rentcontrolled apartments, we don't think this reveals anything about broader regional banks' outlook or national commercial real estate (CRE) concerns, which also flared again.

While some suggest even the biggest banks are exposed to this risk, as big banks' Q4 earnings reveal, their total CRE exposure is a fraction of reported profits. Regardless, this widely watched fear is likely pre-priced. While it could be a headwind for some banks, it isn't a likely systemic threat—and probably plays out slowly over several years. That people focus heavily on it now is another sign of scepticism.

Despite some soft patches, the latest economic data show the largest Emerging Markets (EM) continued growing in the first quarter. While this has helped fear ebb, scepticism remains prevalent, particularly toward China. We think this makes for a bullish EM backdrop because it leaves plenty of room for upside surprise.

China dominated EM developments in Q1. Myriad headlines hype a range of highly publicized economic risks like slowing growth or real estate concerns. In January, yearslong worries over developer Evergrande were again featured, as a Hong Kong court ordered its liquidation following the company's earlier default. Many analysts claim this is the source of weakness in Chinese markets. But in our view, the key is political uncertainty toward business. It is hard for us to see how Evergrande, already down more than -90% from highs, has much surprise power. However, authorities' response could rattle some nerves. Following the ruling, regulators unveiled new rules allowing real estate companies to use bank loans pledged against commercial properties for bond payments and operating expenses—an implicit backstop transferring bad debts to big banks' balance sheets, which many analysts see as a backdoor recapitalization.

In February, the National People's Congress broadened China's already expansive espionage laws to include "work secrets," which aren't official state secrets but those causing "certain adverse effects if leaked." Given the vague definition—and lack of enforcement clarity—foreign businesses operating in China appear alarmed at the potential for arbitrary application. For example, it is not clear how companies' data collection and transfer practices might run afoul of the new rule. And even before this rule, executive detentions—both foreign and domestic—on national security grounds hurt business confidence, limiting their operations and investment in the country. Now, such matters are well-known and sentiment is deeply negative, muting the impact somewhat.

While economic uncertainty does exist, China has also seen continued growth to start the year. Industrial production accelerated to 7.0% y/y in January – February (combined to control for shifting Lunar New Year holidays) from December's 6.8%, while retail sales rose 5.5% y/y, above expectations, though slower than December's 7.4%. Chinese exports accelerated to 7.1% y/y from 2.3%, too, again pointing to how global demand is helping pull EM along.

Headlines touted Premier Li Qiang's March 24 plan fostering "new, quality productive forces" to reinvigorate and focus China's economy on high-tech manufacturing. It appears policymakers are returning to the well of industrial-driven growth after long emphasizing services and consumption. That contributed to its property boom—and bust, with real estate investment still falling -9.0% y/y in 2024's first two months, though improving from December's -24.0% drop.

Yet this has not stopped growth. March's official composite PMI rose 1.8 points to 52.7, keeping it above 50 since June 2022. The non-manufacturing PMI accelerated for the fourth consecutive month (53.0), and the manufacturing PMI showed its first expansion in 12 months (50.8). Perhaps China's new industrial policy eventually results in more misallocated investments. But like its present property woes, we doubt it swings Chinese growth much from its overall trend of gradually slowing.

Elsewhere in East Asia, the centre-left Democratic Progressive Party (DPP) won Taiwan's January 13 elections, with Vice President Ching-te Lai, also known as William Lai, now president-elect. Notably, the DPP lost its legislative majority, taking only 40% of the vote compared to 57% in 2020—the first election since 2000 where the winning candidate failed to get 50% or more. This sets up gridlock, in our view, as compromise with the centre-right Kuomintang (KMT), which won 33% of the vote, and centrist Taiwan People's Party (TPP)—with 26%—will be necessary to pass legislation, making radical measures upsetting markets unlikely. We think this maintains status quo policy continuity Taiwanese equities have been fine with. Taiwan's Q4 GDP also accelerated, to 5.1% y/y versus Q3's 2.3%, as strong domestic consumption and rebounding exports contributed to growth.

Taiwanese exports also continue to accelerate. Taiwan's shipments rose 18.1% y/y in January, quickening from December's 11.7%. While January's export orders were more lacklustre, up just 1.9% y/y, with Taiwan's economic ministry cautioning these could drop off next month due to seasonality, 10 of 12 categories saw year-over-year growth, flipping positive after falling in December and for much of 2023. The improvement from last year appears to have momentum, in our view. While we think equities—and Tech and Tech-like sectors specifically—are well aware of the upturn, the confirmation is welcome. And the guarded sentiment surrounding it suggests the cycle's swing higher is just getting underway.

In South Korea, the Financial Services Commission (FSC) announced broad policy outlines for its "Corporate Value-Up Program" on February 26. As expected, it holds many similarities to Japan's program unveiled last year, aiming to reduce equities' "Korea discount" through voluntary corporate efforts to prioritize shareholder return and encouraging companies to disclose plans enhancing mid- to long-term corporate value. Details remain vague—and could change—but the high-level roadmap suggests it will be incentive-based (e.g., tax benefits) and focused on strengthening governance, not on punitive measures (like delisting or penalties). The FSC will hold a second seminar in May after a feedback period, and guidelines will be formalized in the second half of the year. While these steps could prove positive, they are not a certainty, with execution risking the potential for disappointment.

Elsewhere in EM, as widely anticipated, Egypt floated the pound on March 6 to meet one of the International Money Fund's (IMF) conditions for a bailout. The agreement expands December 2022's $3 billion IMF loan facility to $8 billion. Other conditions include monetary tightening, fiscal consolidation and the reform of state-owned enterprises to increase competition and enlarge the private sector's role in driving growth. Hence, that day, the Central Bank of Egypt also raised rates 6 percentage points to 27.25% to help reduce inflation, which is running above 30% annually.

After the pound began trading freely, it weakened from 30.9 per US dollar to over 50 initially, before trading around 47 at month end. It remains to be seen whether IMF-mandated reforms will be successful, and it could be years before any result. In the meantime, inflation appears set to surge given the pound's devaluation, which along with keeping rates restrictive, likely dampens economic activity.

On March 21, the Central Bank of the Republic of Turkey (CBRT) hiked rates 5 percentage points to 50% under new Governor Fatih Karahan, who took the helm in February after his predecessor resigned. This follows January's 2.5 percentage point hike when the CBRT said it would end rate increases—once again underscoring central bank unpredictability. Despite the unexpected hike, the lira weakened to near record lows. Meanwhile, inflation accelerated to 67.1% y/y in February from January's 64.9%.

High and rising inflation, and borrowing costs appear to have sapped support for President Recep Tayyip Erdogan's AK Party (AKP) in nationwide municipal elections on March 31. The opposition Republican People's Party (CHP), led by Istanbul Mayor Ekrem Imamolu, won 37.8% of the vote to the AKP's 35.5%, the first time the AKP has trailed polls nationally in 22 years. The AKP also lost 15 provinces, shrinking its regional strongholds to 24 of 81, while the CHP picked up 14 to 35, including holding key cities Istanbul and Ankara handily. President Erdogan's adoption of orthodox monetary policy last June (following his re-election)—after years insisting high rates cause high inflation—may be welcome, but it struck us as politically expedient. Given the apparent vote cost, another reversal could be in store, adding to the uncertainty Turkish markets face.

While Egypt's and Turkey's aggressive rate hikes to stem surging inflation are notable, they are outliers in EM. In Latin America, for example, most countries have been cutting rates including the largest, Brazil and Mexico, as inflation has subsided. Moreover, their economies are strengthening as industrial output and exports—helped by higher commodity prices—accelerate.

Copom, Brazil's monetary policy committee, cut its Selic rate another half point for the sixth straight time to 10.75% on March 20, with February's 4.5% y/y inflation rate steady from January's. Brazil's industrial production accelerated to 3.6% y/y in January from December's 1.0%, while its timelier manufacturing purchasing managers' index (PMI) rose to 54.1 in February from January's 52.8 (readings above 50 indicate expansion). This seems to be feeding into Brazilian exports, which rose 16.3% y/y in February for their seventh consecutive monthly gain—and second month of double-digit growth—as global demand improves, partly reflected by energy and metal prices' uptick.

We see similar trends—lower inflation and rates, and global demand lifting commodity prices—helping Mexico. The Bank of Mexico cut a quarter point to 11.0% on March 21, its first since a March 2023 hike, with inflation slowing to 4.4% y/y in February from January's 4.9%. Mexico's industrial production accelerated to 2.9% y/y in January from a flat reading in December, as its February manufacturing PMI hit 52.3 from January's 50.2. Mexican exports jumped 7.7% y/y in February, its biggest gain in more than a year, led by petroleum, agriculture and manufacturing products, particularly automotive for the latter category.

Rounding out major EM countries, India extended its strong run of economic data. Indian industrial production rose 3.8% y/y in January, continuing its 15-month string of gains, as its March flash manufacturing PMI hit a record high 59.2, pointing to more. Its flash services PMI was 60.3, above 60 for the third straight month. While India is rapidly taking its place as another big engine for EM (and global) growth, this is increasingly well-known—and priced—which suggests tempering enthusiasm.

Performance Review

Global Developed Strategies

For the period 1 October 2023 to 31 March 2024, the FII Global Equity High Yield Fund outperformed the MSCI World High Dividend Yield Index. Country and sector allocation, as well as equity selection, contributed to relative return. Selection within the United States was the largest contributor to relative return, driven by graphics processor designer and software company Nvidia, semiconductor company Broadcom, and heavy equipment manufacturer Caterpillar. Additionally, an overweight to and selection within Information Technology also contributed, as semiconductor production equipment supplier Tokyo Electron, technology conglomerate Microsoft, and semiconductor manufacturer Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing outperformed. Conversely, an underweight to and selection within Consumer Discretionary was the largest detractor from relative return, driven by athletic and lifestyle apparel and equipment company Nike, and auto manufacturers Ford and Volkswagen. 2. Material accounting policies (continued)

In accordance with IAS 34, comparative figures to the six month financial period ended 31 March 2024 are for the six month financial period ended 31 March 2023 and the comparative figures as at 31 March 2024 are as at 30 September 2023, the previous Statement of Financial Position date.

Items included in the financial statements of the Company are measured in US Dollars ("US$"), being the currency of the primary economic environment in which the Company operates (the "functional currency"). The Company has also adopted US$ as its presentation currency. The financial statements of the Sub-Funds are presented in US$, with the exception of FII European Equity Fund, whose financial statements are presented in Euro ("EUR"), being the Sub-Fund's functional currency. The liquidity of the Company is managed on a day to day basis in US$ in order to handle the issue, acquisition and resale of the Sub-Funds' redeemable participating shares.

In respect of FII European Equity Fund, the Company's Statement of Financial Position is translated using relevant EUR/US$ exchange rate at each respective financial period/year end date. The Company's Statement of Comprehensive Income, Statement of Changes in Net Assets Attributable to Holders of Redeemable Participating Shares and Statement of Cash Flows are translated at an average EUR/US$ exchange rate (as an approximation of actual rates) over each respective financial period for inclusion in the Company's financial statements.

The currency gain or loss arising on use of average exchange rate for the translation of the Company's Statement of Comprehensive Income and Statement of Changes in Net Assets Attributable to Holders of Redeemable Participating Shares is included in the Company's Statement of Changes in Net Assets Attributable to Holders of Redeemable Participating Shares, as "Notional exchange rate adjustment." This translation adjustment does not impact the net assets allocated to the individual Sub-Funds.

3. Efficient portfolio management – ("EPM")

The Company may employ investment techniques and instruments for efficient portfolio management of the assets of the Company and, in particular, the Company may, for the purpose of hedging (whether against currency, exchange rate risks or otherwise), or for direct investment purposes, use spot contracts, forward contracts, futures contracts and other derivative instruments and may also enter into sale and repurchase agreements.

The Company will employ a risk management process which will enable it to accurately monitor, measure and manage the risks attached to financial derivative positions and details of this process have been provided to the Central Bank.

FII Global Developed Equity ESG Fund and FII Global Low Volatility Equity Fund entered into forward foreign currency exchange contracts for the purpose of hedging against currency risk during the six month financial period ended 31 March 2024. The Company's financial risk management policies and procedures applied during the financial period under review are consistent with those disclosed in the Company's most recent annual audited financial statements as at and for the financial year ended 30 September 2023.

Use of financial derivative instruments for hedging purposes

The Sub-Funds may invest in FDIs for hedging purposes. The Sub-Funds may engage in transactions in forward foreign exchange contracts to hedge against currency risk.

The Company on behalf of a Sub-Fund may enter into transaction in over-the-counter markets with an approved counterparty, which will expose a Sub-Fund to the credit of the approved counterparty and their ability to satisfy the terms of such contracts. For example, the Company on behalf of a Sub-Fund may enter into repurchase agreements, forwards contracts, options and swap arrangements or other derivative techniques, each of which expose a Sub-Fund to the risk that the approved counterparty may default on its obligations to perform under the relevant contract. In the event of a bankruptcy or insolvency of an approved counterparty, a Sub-Fund could experience delays in liquidating the position and significant losses, including declines in the value of its investments during such period and fees and expenses incurred in enforcing its rights.

4. Financial instruments and associated risks (continued)

Use of financial derivative instruments for hedging purposes (continued) The Manager on behalf of a Sub-Fund has filed with the Central Bank a risk management process which enables it to accurately measure, monitor and manage the various risks associated with the use of FDIs.

Fair value hierarchy

IFRS 13 requires the Company to classify fair value measurements using a fair value hierarchy that reflects the significance of the inputs used in making the measurements.

The fair value hierarchy has the following levels:

- Level 1: Quoted prices (unadjusted) in active markets for identical assets or liabilities.
- Level 2: Inputs other than quoted prices included within Level 1 that are observable for the asset or liability, either directly (that is, as prices) or indirectly (that is, derived from prices).
- Level 3: Certain inputs for the asset or liability that are not based on observable market data (that is, unobservable inputs).

The level in the fair value hierarchy within which the fair value measurement is categorised in its entirety is determined on the basis of the lowest level input that is significant to the fair value measurement in its entirety. For this purpose, the significance of an input is assessed against the fair value measurement in its entirety. If a fair value measurement uses observable inputs that require significant adjustment based on unobservable inputs, that measurement is a Level 3 measurement. Assessing the significance of a particular input to the fair value measurement in its entirety requires judgement, considering factors specific to the asset or liability.

The determination of what constitutes "observable" requires significant judgement by the Investment Manager.

The Investment Manager considers observable data to be that market data that is readily available, regularly distributed or updated, reliable and verifiable, not proprietary, and provided by independent sources that are actively involved in the relevant market.

Fair value hierarchy (continued)

As at 31 March 2024 and 30 September 2023 there were investments related to Russian securities held within FII Emerging Markets Equity Fund, FII Emerging Markets Equity ESG Fund, FII Emerging Markets Concentrated Equity ESG Fund, FII European Equity Fund and FII Global Low Volatility Equity Fund. These securities were valued at zero and classified as Level 3 due to the following reasons: the inability of the Sub-Funds to transact in these investments, the lack of visibility on when the Sub-Funds may do so, and the lack of readily available market prices for such investments. All of these factors are related to the Russian invasion of Ukraine and responses to that event. Additionally, OmniAB, Inc. (USD12.5 vesting) and OmniAB, Inc. (USD12.5 vesting) held within FII US Small Cap Core Equity ESG Fund and FII US Small Cap and Mid-Cap Core Equity Fund were classified as Level 3 securities as at 31 March 2024 and 30 September 2023 as they are valued at Nil and are not transferable. The securities will continue to be valued at Nil until such time as they meet specific earning targets and therefore becomes transferable. During the period, shares of Tata Consumer Products Ltd were terminated and ceased trading. As of the end of the period, it was undecided how the shares will be distributed. Due to the high cost of exchanging the depository shares to ordinaries, the Investment Manager decided to stale price the position until it fully terminates for the potential cash distribution.

The following table presents the movement in level 3 instruments held at 31 March 2024 and at 30 September 2023:

- FII Emerging Markets Equity ESG Fund,
- FII US Small Cap Core Equity ESG Fund,
- FII Global Developed Equity ESG Fund,
- FII US Equity ESG Fund,

In addition, the expense cap for FII Global Equity ESG Fund was updated from 0.25% to 0.15%. The updated Supplements for the Sub-Funds were issued and noted by the Central Bank on 29 February 2024.

At the financial period end, economic and financial market uncertainties remain elevated, driven by higher sustained inflation and tightening monetary policy as Central Banks have increased base rates, along with the tightening of credit conditions as illustrated with recent events in the banking sector. These market conditions are contributing to additional volatility and fluctuation in market variables including but not limited to interest rates, foreign exchange, equity prices, commodity prices, widening credit spreads, implied volatilities and asset correlations. Management are actively monitoring events, along with the ongoing conflict in Ukraine and other geopolitical events, and any exposure to elevated risk sectors. See note 4 to the financial statements for details of Russian securities held on the Funds.

The Company is an umbrella fund with segregated liability between Sub-Funds, and under Irish law the Company generally will not be liable as a whole to third parties and there generally will not be the potential for cross liability between the Sub-Funds. Notwithstanding the foregoing, there can be no assurance that, should an action be brought against the Company in the courts of another jurisdiction, the segregated nature of the Sub-Funds would necessarily be upheld.
