Market Comment

April was a positive month for technology-, media and telecom stocks. The funds reference index returned 2.2 per cent compared to 3.6 per cent for the fund.

Performance

Among the notable positive contributors for the month were Ericsson and Baidu. The stock of the wireless network equipment maker Ericsson performed well during the month after reporting strong quarterly results. The company is making progress on the restructuring plan and there are signs of their end markets stabilizing. Shares of Chinese search technology company Baidu did well after reporting strong quarterly results and guidance. The company continues to streamline its operations and we expect operating leverage to continue. Among the notable negative contributors for the month were Lenovo and Comcast. Shares of the PC producer Lenovo fell during the month. Despite an improving outlook for the PC division, where Lenovo is taking market share, investor focus has shifted to the underperforming mobile phone and data center divisions. Shares of cable company Comcast fell after confirming they are bidding for Sky PLC and there are worries that they will also bid for Twenty-First Century Fox.

Investment Horizon

The technology-, media and telecom sectors are characterized by strong, stable earnings. Interest rates are low and there are a number of structural growth drivers in the sectors. In our opinion, there has been too little investment in IT and telecom infrastructure in recent years, and our belief is that this provides the foundation for good growth in the future. The investment universe is continuously changing with new business models emerging at the cost of legacy businesses. This creates a solid foundation for an active and opportunistic approach to stock picking.

Disclaimer

Investments in mutual funds/alternative investment funds always entail a financial risk. In volatile or uncertain market conditions, significant fluctuations in the value or return on that investment may occur. Investments in foreign securities or currencies involve additional risk as the foreign security or currency might lose value against the investor's reference currency. Alternative investments products and investment strategies (e.g. hedge funds or private equity) may be complex and may carry a higher degree of risk. Such risks can arise from extensive use of short sales, derivatives and leverage. Furthermore, the minimum investment periods for such investments may be longer than traditional investment products. Alternative investment strategies (e.g. hedge funds) are intended only for investors who understand and accept the risks associated with investments in such products. Historical returns, past performance and financial market scenarios are no guarantee of future returns. Investments in funds can both increase and decrease in value, and there is no guarantee that an investor will get the entire invested amount back. Significant losses are always possible. The value of an investment in the share class can go up and down. When you sell your shares, they may be worth less than what you paid for them. If your currency as an investor is different from the share class currency, changes in currency exchange rates could reduce any investment gains or increase any investment losses. This unit class has a high volatility (how sharply the unit class' unit price has gone up and down in a recent period, generally several years). The sub-fund's manager may also invest in derivatives.

Main risks are:

Concentration risk	To the extent that the sub-fund invests heavily in a company, industry or country that is heavily affected by an adverse event, its share price could fall.
Liquidity risk	Certain securities could become hard to value, or to sell at a desired time and price.
Management risk	Portfolio management techniques that have worked well in normal market conditions could prove ineffective or detrimental during unusual conditions.
Derivatives risk	Certain derivatives could behave unexpectedly or could expose the sub-fund to losses that are significantly greater than the cost of the derivative.
Counterparty risk	The sub-fund could lose money if an entity with which it does business becomes unwilling or unable to honor its obligations to the fund.
