The Company was incorporated in Ireland on 5 February 2002 and authorised by the Central Bank of Ireland (the “Central Bank”) on 13 September 2002. On 13 February 2004 the Company was authorised by the Central Bank under the European Communities (Undertakings for Collective Investment in Transferable Securities) Regulations, 2003, as amended. The Company has nineteen funds, each of which has one Share class. Other funds and classes may be established from time to time.

Potential investors are advised to read the Prospectus and any Supplements or addenda thereto (the “Prospectus”) dated 20 December 2010 before making an investment decision. The rights and duties of the investor as well as the legal relationship with the Company are laid down in the Prospectus. Capitalised expressions used and/or defined in this Simplified Prospectus shall bear the meanings as set out in the Prospectus.

The base currency of the RAFI US 1000 Fund is U.S. Dollars and there is currently one Share class available to investors – the US Dollar Share class.

Investment Objective:	To provide investors with investment results which, before expenses, correspond to the price and yield performance of the FTSE RAFI US 1000 Index in U.S. Dollar terms.

Investment Policy:	To achieve this investment objective, the RAFI US 1000 Fund will so far as possible and practicable hold all of the shares in the FTSE RAFI US 1000 Index in their respective weightings in the Index, subject to the Investment Restrictions.
---------------------------	--

It is the Investment Manager’s intention to achieve the investment objective of this Fund by holding a portfolio of securities that, as far as possible and practicable, consists of the component securities of the Index. However, there are a number of circumstances where this may be prohibited by regulation, or may not otherwise be in the interests of Shareholders. These include, but are not limited to, the following:

- (i) The RAFI US 1000 Fund is subject to the Regulations which include, inter alia, certain restrictions on the proportion of the RAFI US 1000 Fund’s value which may be held in individual securities. Depending on the concentration of the Index, this Fund may hold financial derivative instruments (“FDIs”) (as outlined below) within the limits set out in the Prospectus, provided that the FDIs are securities which are correlated to, or the return on which is based on securities which form part of the Index.
- (ii) The constituent securities of the Index change from time to time. The Investment Manager may adopt a variety of strategies when trading the RAFI US 1000 Fund to bring it in line with the changed benchmark. For example where a security which forms part of the Index is not available or a market for such security does not exist, the RAFI US 1000 Fund may instead hold depository receipts relating to such securities (eg ADRs and GDRs).
- (iii) From time to time, securities in the Index may be subject to corporate actions. The Investment Manager has discretion to manage these events in the most efficient manner.
- (iv) The RAFI US 1000 Fund may hold ancillary liquid assets and will normally have dividends receivable. The Investment Manager may purchase FDIs, for direct investment purposes, to produce a return similar to the return on the Index.
- (v) Securities held by the RAFI US 1000 Fund and included in the Index may, from time to time, become illiquid or otherwise unobtainable at fair value. In these circumstances, the Investment Manager may use a number of techniques, including purchasing securities whose returns, individually or collectively, are seen to be well-correlated to desired constituents of the Index or purchasing a sample of stocks in the Index.
- (vi) The Investment Manager will have regard to the costs of any proposed portfolio transaction. It may not necessarily be efficient to execute transactions which bring the Fund perfectly in line with the Index at all times.

- (vii) The RAFI US 1000 Fund may sell stocks that are represented in the Index in anticipation of their removal from the Index, or purchase stocks not represented in the Index in anticipation of their addition to the Index.

The Investment Manager may utilise various combinations of available investment techniques, in seeking to track the Index. These may include FDIs including, but not limited to, swaps, swaptions and options to hedge or to achieve exposure to a particular market instead of investing directly. FDIs may be used for direct investment and/or efficient portfolio management purposes in accordance with the limitations set down in Schedule II to the Prospectus. FDIs will be used subject to the conditions of, and within the limits laid down by the Central Bank and will only be used in conjunction with a risk management process ("RMP") that has been cleared in advance by the Central Bank which enables a Fund to measure, monitor and manage the risks associated with FDIs. While it is not the Investment Manager's intention to leverage the RAFI US 1000 Fund, any leverage resulting from the use of FDIs will be done so in accordance with the Regulations.

The RAFI US 1000 Fund may, in order to gain exposure to the components of the Index or for cash management purposes, hold ancillary liquid assets such as cash, commercial paper and money market obligations such as short and medium-term treasury bills and treasury notes, certificates of deposit, bankers' acceptances, and variable and floating rate instruments which are either of investment grade or are issued or guaranteed by a national government or its agencies.

Risk Profile: The value of shares may fall as well as rise and investors may not receive back the amount invested.

In addition to the general risk considerations outlined in the Risk Factors section of the Prospectus, investors in this Fund should consider the following specific risk factors:

The investments of the Fund will be subject to market fluctuations as the value of the equities in which the Fund may invest may rise or fall.

Even though the Shares of this Fund are to be listed on one or more stock exchanges, there can be no certainty that there will be liquidity in the Shares on any stock exchange or that the market price at which the Shares may be traded on a stock exchange will be the same as or approximately equal to the Net Asset Value per Share.

Whilst this Fund will seek to track an Index, there can be no guarantee of this.

Derivative instruments involve various types and degrees of risk, depending upon the characteristics of the particular instrument and the assets of the Fund as a whole. Use of these instruments may entail investment exposures that are greater than their cost would suggest, meaning that a small investment in derivatives could have a large impact on the Fund's performance. Investors are specifically referred to Appendix II of the Full Prospectus in this regard.

The market price of Shares of this Fund will fluctuate in accordance with changes in its Net Asset Value and supply and demand on the relevant exchange. It is expected that Shares in this Fund will trade closely to their Net Asset Value however supply and demand on the relevant exchange together with any disruptions to creations and redemptions may result in trading prices that differ significantly from the Net Asset Value.
