Portfolio managers comments

Without spreading to the rest of the emerging and developed markets, fears of China's economic slowdown and the return in force of Xi Jinping's economic authoritarianism have weighed on the Shanghai stock market, which has officially entered a correction, losing 20% since its highs. From a financial asset growth perspective, China has decoupled from the rest of the world, particularly the US and Europe, which are trading at their highest levels of the year. The dreaded Jackson Hole meeting actually produced a brief and reassuring speech for the markets in which a soothing Jerome Powell reminded them that the beginning of a reduction in the pace of asset buybacks should in no way presage a rate hike, while reiterating his retreat from inflation: he believes it to be only very temporary and that there is no urgency to act too harshly against it. At the same time, macroeconomic data on both sides of the Atlantic confirm that there is no acceleration of economic overheating. Against this backdrop of economic mediocrity in the Voltairean sense of the word, i.e. a state of "neither too much nor too little" that is not conducive to changing anything in the way of fiscal and monetary support, the markets continue to be supported by the flows of reassured investors, with a clear bias towards quality and growth stocks, which outweigh cyclical and defensive stocks. The equity portfolio allocation was pushed close to its highs for the year in August as markets briefly priced in the risks of the FED meeting, the Chinese situation and the disturbing data on the proliferation of the delta strain of the virus. The central scenario remains that of a continuation (albeit less vivid) of the recovery and a return to economic normality, arguing in favour of an equity allocation of between 70 and 80%. Hedging positions are still necessary in view of the health risks. After the sharp reduction in the China allocation, the trend to reduce the cyclical portion of the portfolio was accentuated. The portfolio was refocused on US technology stocks (Microsoft, Alphabet, Nvidia, Accenture, Paypal, etc.) and northern and continental European stocks. China's growth potential remains undeniable, but clearer visibility on the party's intentions regarding its economic and capital model is needed before we can give the Middle Kingdom the place it deserves in our allocation.

Glossary

Beta. Measures the average extent to which a fund moves relative to the broader market. The beta of a market is 1. A fund with a beta of more than 1 moves on average to a greater extent than the market. A fund with a beta of less than 1 moves on average to a lesser extent. If beta is a minus number, it is likely that the stock and the market move in opposite directions.

Correlation coefficient. The correlation coefficient is a measure of correlation. It is used to determine the relationship between two assets over a given period. A positive coefficient means that the two assets move in the same direction. Conversely, a negative coefficient means that the assets move in the opposite direction. The correlation or decorrelation can be more or less strong and varies between -1 and 1.

Dividend yield. Annual dividends per share / Price per share

EV (Enterprise Value). Market value of common stock + market value of preferred equity + market value of debt + minority interest - cash and investments.

Maturity. The time when a bond or other debt instrument is due to for redemption (is due to mature); or the length of time between the issue of such an instrument and the date it is due for redemption (the maturity date).

ND/EBITDA (Net Debt / EBITDA). A measurement of leverage, calculated as a company's interest-bearing liabilities minus cash or cash equivalents, divided by its EBITDA. The net debt to EBITDA ratio is a debt ratio that shows how many years it would take for a company to pay back its debt if net debt and EBITDA are held constant.

P/B. The Price to Book Ratio is the ratio of the market value of equity (market capitalisation) to its book value. It is used to compare the market valuation of a company with its book value.

P/CF (Share Price/Cash Flow per Share). The price-to-cash-flow ratio is an indicator of a stock's valuation.

PER (Price Earnings Ratio). A company's share price divided by the amount of profits it makes for each share in a 12-month period. PE ratios are normally calculated on the base of all the profit made in the period, whether or not the profit is paid out to shareholders in that period.

Sensitivity. The sensitivity of a bond measures the change in its percentage value induced by a given change in interest rates.

Sharpe Ratio. A way of measuring the historical risk-adjusted return on an investment. It is the average previous return minus the risk-free return, divided by the standard deviation (a measure of risk that looks at the diversion of actual returns from expected returns).

Sharpe Ratio. The Sharpe ratio measures the excess return over the risk-free money rate of an asset portfolio divided by the standard deviation of that return. It is therefore a measure of the marginal return per unit of risk. It is used to measure the performance of managers with different risk policies.

Tracking error. Tracking Error is a measure of how closely an investment portfolio follows the index against which it is benchmarked. It is the difference in the return earned by a portfolio and the return earned by the benchmark against which the portfolio is constructed. For example, if a bond portfolio earns a return of 5.15% during a period when the portfolio's benchmark (say, for example, the Lehman Brothers Index) produces a return of 5.06%, the tracking error is .09%, or 9 basis points.
