

Monthly Comment

The Alken Fund European Opportunities rose 8.7% in March against 3.9% for the benchmark. This brings the relative performance to 2.7% year to date.

Investor sentiment remained buoyant in March boosted by robust consumer trends and early signs of recovery in industrial segments. Inflation risks remain but central banks seem more inclined to pivot soon although at a slower pace.

The portfolio delivered a remarkable performance in March as the market focus shifted towards business fundamentals. Vallourec was the strongest position this month after ArcelorMittal announced it had acquired a strategic stake in the company reinforcing the prospects for the business. Technip was another strong contributor following better than expected results with incremental cash returns to shareholders and strong business momentum.

In contrast, Soitec was the largest detractor following weaker than expected outlook as customer inventories remain high and will take longer to be digested despite improving trends in the smartphone market.

Our current bias towards mid-cap stocks could provide a tailwind as significant undervaluation and a resilient economic environment should support good performance across these names. Early signs of an upturn in industrial activity and rising real interest rates should present selectively attractive opportunities across cyclical and financials.
