

AXA WF Global Inflation Bonds I (H) USD

Fund Managers's Comment

With no major monetary policy decisions, the rates market was fully driven by data releases which were in majority surprising to the upside. Therefore, the narrative shifted towards a "higher for longer" rates environment, significantly de-pricing rate cuts for 2024 and putting bear flattening pressures in the yield curve.

Inflation breakevens remained supported, delivering positive performance across all markets particularly at the front end. While oil prices were stable during the month (around 82$/bl), inflation prints surprised to the upside as well as leading indicators, particularly in the US.

In the US, January's inflation data came in stronger than expected. Headline CPI printed at +0.3% mom vs. +0.2% Dec and +0.2% forecasted. Core-CPI also surprised on the upside at +0.4% (unrounded +0.392%) vs. +0.3% prior. Looking into details, "supercore" (core-CPI services ex-rent/OER) was 0.849% versus 0.340% prior which revived doubts about inflation converging towards the 2% target. Also PPI and headline payrolls printed much higher-than-expected in January at +353k (highest since Jan 2023) vs. the +185k consensus setting doubts about the labor market softening and future normalization in core services.

But just in the aftermath, UK CPI inflation was unchanged at 4.0% in January (consensus and BoE expectations were for an uptick to 4.1%). Core CPI was steady and RPI eased to 4.9% yoy vs a consensus of 5.1%. The steady headline and core reading came about despite a January increase in utility bills (adding almost 0.2ppts to the CPI rate versus December), a rise in used car prices and comparison against weakness in a number of services categories last January, measures that remain volatile.

Performance was negative in the "all maturities" universe. On a duration adjusted basis, the front end underperformed in a sharp bear flattening move. Market repriced a slower path of rate cuts for this year from 6 to just 3 cuts of 25bp over 2024. The US was the worst performer amongst all markets as it saw the highest upward macroeconomic surprises. We continue looking for attractive entry points to add duration to the portfolios. Relative performance of the fund was negative during the period.

ESG Metrics Definition

Our approach to ESG measurement seeks to combine qualitative and quantitative techniques. The tree rating shown in this report is a simple pictorial representation of the overall ESG rating of the fund's portfolio. A fund which has 1 tree has a poor ESG rating, whereas a fund with 5 trees has a high ESG rating. For more information on our ESG standards, approach and methodology please visit: Putting ESG to work | AXA IM Core (axa-im.com).

ESG relative rating is calculated as the difference between the ESG absolute rating of the portfolio and the ESG absolute rating of benchmark. If ESG Relative rating is positive (negative), this means that the portfolio has a higher (lower) ESG absolute rating than the benchmark.

CO2 relative intensity is calculated as the difference between the intensity of the fund (expressed in tCO2/M€ Revenues) and the one of benchmark.

If CO2 Relative intensity is green, it means that the intensity of portfolio is lower than that of the benchmark. If CO2 Relative intensity orange, it means that the intensity of the portfolio is higher than that of the benchmark. If CO2 Relative intensity is yellow, it means that intensity of the portfolio is similar than that of the benchmark.
