Performance

Indexed value (until 31-03-2024) - Source: Robeco

Performance

Based on transaction prices, the fund's return was 4.62%.

Robeco BP US Premium Equities slightly trailed the Russell 3000 Value Index in July. Over 100% of the detractor to sector allocation came from two sectors: healthcare and energy. The fund's overweight exposure to healthcare provider and services companies weighed on performance as the outlook in the industry remains weaker following lack-luster revenue forecasts, while an underweight in energy weighed on relative results. From a stock selection perspective, healthcare and consumer discretionary added value. Not holding healthcare equipment company Abbott Laboratories added to relative returns, as the stock fell over 4% during the month. Additionally, AMN Healthcare Services, a healthcare staffing company and off-benchmark holding, contributed positively, as the stock climbed over 11% during March. Within consumer discretionary, motorcycle company Harley-Davidson has climbed higher in recent months, continuing this in March, rising 21%, as the company beat estimates during the fourth quarter and the outlook continues high.

Market development

Equity markets in the United States climbed higher in the last month of the first quarter, returning 3.22% as measured by the S&P 500 Index. Value took back leadership over growth in the month with mid caps rising 5.18%, followed by large caps and small caps which rose 5.00% and 4.38% respectively, as measured by their respective Russell Value Index.

Expectation of fund manager

We have entered a period of inflation that will last longer than initially thought. Historically speaking, when inflation reaches 8% or higher, it generally takes eight to ten years to revert back to levels around 3%. Fortunately, these periods have been beneficial for value investors in the past, and this will be a key component for the market moving forward. As always, we remain focused on selecting companies from the bottom-up that reflect Boston Partners' three-circle characteristics – attractive valuations, solid business fundamentals, and identifiable catalysts.
