INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE

The fund aims to provide equity-type returns with less-than-commensurate risk and to outperform its benchmark over a full market cycle. The fund targets balanced convertibles that are expected to provide both meaningful downside protection if equities weaken and upside participation if the underlying shares appreciate. We focus on securities issued in the United States, Europe and Asia.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY¹

Global equity markets fell in September. Stocks struggled in an environment of steadily-rising interest rates, putting notable pressure on growth-oriented stocks (the NASDAQ was down 5.3%). Outside of the United States, Chinese equities sold off on the Evergrande debt crisis and ongoing regulatory concerns, which spilled over into other markets as investors worried about the potential slowdown in global growth. We have no exposure to Evergrande or any other high-yielding property developers in China. Against this backdrop, convertible bonds limited losses to roughly 44% of the equity market decline, which is what we hope for in this type of environment. Global new issuance of convertibles was robust during the month, with $14.4 billion coming to market across 25 new deals. This brought year-to-date issuance to $124.0 billion. The issuance was well-diversified in September, with all regions and many industries seeing healthy volumes. The most active industries during the month were media, materials and technology. New issue pricing has become more issuer-friendly than in 2020, and we continue to evaluate each deal on a case-by-case basis. The Fund generated a negative return in September, but outperformed equities. By region, the United States detracted the most from our absolute performance, followed by Europe. Our holdings in Japan had a positive effect. By sector, information technology (IT services and software), consumer discretionary (internet and catalog retail) and health care (biotechnology) negatively impacted our absolute results. Consumer staples had a slight positive effect. The Fund performed in line with its benchmark in September. By region, security selection within the United States detracted from our relative results, as did our holdings in Europe. Security selection in Japan had a slight positive effect, though our underweight allocation there hurt us. At the sector level, security selection among industrials (airlines) and consumer discretionary (media) detracted the most from our relative performance. Consumer staples had a positive impact.
