INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE

The fund aims to provide equity-type returns with less-than-commensurate risk and to outperform its benchmark over a full market cycle. The fund targets balanced convertibles that are expected to provide both meaningful downside protection if equities weaken and upside participation if the underlying shares appreciate. We focus on securities issued in the United States, Europe and Asia.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY¹

Global equity markets performed well in March as favorable economic data buoyed risk sentiment. U.S. GDP data for the fourth quarter of 2023 was revised higher, jobless claims declined and manufacturing activity increased. The strength in economic data, alongside upside surprises on inflation, led investors to dial back their expectations for Fed rates cuts. The global convertible primary market activity remained strong in March, with $10.8 billion coming to market across 18 new deals. Although most of the issuance was concentrated in the United States, the new deals were well-diversified by sector. As always, we continue to evaluate each new deal on a case-by-case basis.

We continue to believe that convertibles are a conservative way to gain equity market exposure. Current equity valuations appear sensible, as global stock prices remain below their 2021 highs. The rally in broader equity indices (such as the FTSE World) over the past 12 months has been concentrated in a small number of names (i.e., the "Magnificent 7" and AI beneficiaries), therefore, we think underlying equities in the convertible universe could benefit if the market rally continues to widen out.

The Fund generated a gain in March and outperformed its benchmark. Our holdings across all regions positively impacted our absolute returns, led by those in the United States and Europe (mostly France and Italy). At the sector level, our holdings within industrials, information technology and consumer discretionary contributed the most to our absolute performance, while our real estate names had a negative effect. On a relative basis, our security selection in the United States and Europe (notably Germany and France) positively impacted our returns, while our selection in Japan detracted. At the sector level, our security selection among industrials (aerospace and defense) and utilities (independent power and renewable energy producers) contributed positively, while our selection among communication services had a negative effect.
