Performance

Indexed value (until 29-02-2024) - Source: Robeco

Performance

Based on transaction prices, the fund's return was 2.73%. Robeco BP Global Premium Equities trailed the core MSCI World Index in February, with stock selection having the largest impact. Stock selection across various sectors weighed on relative returns during the month, with the selection in consumer discretionary and information technology the largest areas of weakness. Detraction from stock picking in consumer discretionary and information technology had more to do with the avoidance of two of the Magnificent Seven stocks, rather than with what the fund held. Not owning Amazon and NVIDIA collectively detracted 98% of the total detraction from the two aforementioned sectors. Stocks that contributed to performance over the month in those two sectors included Stellantis, Dell Technologies and the avoidance of Apple. On the positive side, stock selection was strong in industrials, as a wide range of holdings spread across several industries added value. From a sector allocation standpoint, a large underweight exposure to the information technology sector weighed on the relative performance.

Market development

Global markets, as measured by the MSCI World Index continued to climb higher in February, climbing 4.28% (USD/net), while the MSCI World Value Index trailed the growthier core index, climbing 2.47% (USD/net). The strongest sectors for the MSCI World Index came in information technology (+6%) and industrials (+6%).

Expectation of fund manager

2024 is off to a familiar start with mega-cap tech stocks continuing to lead in terms of performance, generally speaking. The rate cut backdrop has changed significantly since the end of 2023, with projected rate cuts of 175 basis points during the year having fallen precipitously to just 75 basis points of cuts in 2024. We have entered a period of higher-for-longer inflation which, fortunately, has been beneficial for value investors, historically speaking. This will be an important factor to keep an eye on as the market environment continues to evolve, and the case for value names continues to grow. As always, we remain focused on selecting companies from the bottom-up that reflect Boston Partners' three-circle characteristics – attractive valuations, solid business fundamentals, and identifiable catalysts.
