Performance

Based on transaction prices, the fund's return was 6.22%.

Robeco BP US Select Opportunities strongly outperformed the Russell Mid Cap Value Index in February. Stock selection was positive over the month for the fund, mostly driven by three sectors: industrials, healthcare and technology. Within industrials, the fund did well, seeing holdings rise 10.5% compared to 8.9% for the index. Top holdings included aerospace and defense businesses BWX Technologies and Howmet Aerospace along with building companies Masco, Advanced Drainage Systems and Resideo Technologies. In healthcare, avoiding biotechs and healthcare technology added value in addition to owning ICON, a clinical research organization, which gained 23% on the back of an earnings beat and margin expansion reported in late February. Finally, in technology, the fund added value with electronics business Flex, hardware mainstay Dell Technologies and semiconductor-related names NXP and Qorvo. Each of these four names were up more than 14% during February, as stock picking drove the full sector result. Sector allocation was also positive over the month.

Market development

Equity markets in the United States climbed higher during February, rising 5.34%, as measured by the S&P 500 Index. Growth outperformed value during the month, with large/mega-cap growth stocks performing well amid a better-than-expected earnings season. The Russell 1000 Value Index climbed nearly 4% higher during the month, with small and mid caps following suit, climbing as well, but not enough to surpass the growth side of the market.

Expectation of fund manager

2024 is off to a familiar start with mega-cap tech stocks continuing to lead in terms of performance, generally speaking. The rate cut backdrop has changed significantly since the end of 2023, with projected rate cuts of 175 basis points during the year having fallen precipitously to just 75 basis points of cuts in 2024. We have entered a period of higher-for-longer inflation which, fortunately, has been beneficial for value investors, historically speaking. This will be an important factor to keep an eye on as the market environment continues to evolve, and the case for value names continues to grow. As always, we remain focused on selecting companies from the bottom-up that reflect Boston Partners' three-circle characteristics – attractive valuations, solid business fundamentals, and identifiable catalysts.

Top 10 largest positions

ICON Plc and Masco entered the top ten in February, with Halliburton and CenterPoint Energy exiting.
