FUND COMMENTARY

The MSCI AC Asia Pacific ex Japan index was flat in USD terms (+2.5% in EUR) in July. Your portfolio lagged the index over the month as Chinese markets (to which your portfolio is overweight) gave back some of the June gains. July news flow was dominated by another US Federal Reserve rate hike, pushing the federal funds rate to a range of 2.25%-2.5%. The US yield curve inverted to a level not seen since 2000, suggesting greater probability of a future recession.

Whilst cognisant of the current backdrop, we do not have any particular advantage in forecasting macroeconomics. While we do stress test our assumptions, our main focus is on our companies' ability to grow their earnings despite a potentially adverse environment.

Corporates have started to release their Q2'22 results which have been rather satisfactory to date. TSMC reported strong results and raised its 2022 revenue guidance to +35% year-on-year. Crucially, management did not seem particularly concerned about the outlook, barring a mild inventory correction. Sinbon, the Taiwanese specialty cable maker, reported +19% profit growth in Q2'22 and raised its revenue guidance for the year on the back of strong demand from its solar and automotive clients.

In Korea, LG Chem increased its guidance for its electric vehicle batteries division. Orion, a confectionary maker with operations in Korea and China, beat market expectations as the price hikes the company put through several quarters ago in China are starting to bear fruit. We increased the position in June.

FPT Corp., a Vietnamese IT services company which also operates the largest private IT university in the country, grew its profits by 25% in Q2'22 and continues to target 20% growth for the full year.

Alibaba shares suffered as the US SEC (Securities and Exchange Commission) announced that the group was added to its list of ADRs facing delisting unless the company complies by 2024. The move comes despite Alibaba's announcement that it intends to complete its dual primary listing by the end of 2022.
