FUND COMMENTARY

Global markets in general had a strong start to 2023 and notably the US (mainly in large-cap growth and Artificial Intelligence "AI" exposed names) and Japan (mainly in large-cap industrial trading conglomerates which have garnered famed investor optimism) continued to push higher in the second quarter. There has been no significant and material change to the macro backdrop through the year. We are awaiting the impending and 'most anticipated recession of all time'. Global central banks continue to tighten by both reducing liquidity and hiking rates (despite a single pause in June by the US Federal Reserve and Bank of Japan), the contagion risk from US and European regional bank stress (albeit more muted now) remains a concern, inflation continues to be stubbornly high (albeit slowing thanks to cooling energy markets) and Chinese economic data seems weak with little substantive fiscal support of any meaningful size.

Your portfolio outperformed its reference index in H1'23 thanks to stock selection across most markets. Strong contributors included Eli Lilly, Microsoft and ASML. Eli Lilly, a leader in multiple therapeutics and most notably in diabetes and obesity, posted strong quarterly results with excitement and fundamental growth materialising across its diabetes franchise where Trulicity and Mounjaro (which combined represent 37% of sales) grew a staggering 59% year-on-year (YoY). Once Mounjaro is approved for weight loss later this year the growth momentum should continue. Microsoft requires no introduction and continues to benefit from growth across its cloud platform (Azure) which, whilst guided to decelerate with the wider industry, benefitted specifically from AI services. The cross sell/revenue synergies and implications of utilising AI across the rest of the productivity suite is a powerful driver for further pricing gains. ASML, the de facto monopoly maker of EUV lithography machines for the semiconductor industry, posted solid first quarter results which saw sales grow a staggering 90% YoY. The company maintained its guidance to grow sales by 25% for the full year 2023.

Detractors over the first half-year included Johnson & Johnson, Inner Mongolia Yili and AIA. Johnson & Johnson, the global pharmaceutical behemoth, was impacted by slowing sales in the near-term but we find the company's medium-term guidance reassuring. The market is however still sceptical that it will hit its 2025 pharmaceutical division revenue target of $60bn whereas we are more confident of this. The company's recent Q1'23 results were solid, seeing organic revenue growth of 5% in Pharmaceuticals and 6% in Medtech. Inner Mongolia Yili, the leading dairy producer in China, has lagged as it is perceived as less of a "reopening play". The company posted sanguine Q1'23 results which disappointed (sales +8% YoY and profits +4% YoY) but full-year guidance implies mid-teens profit growth and we remain convinced that this will be delivered. Lastly AIA, the pan-Asian life insurer, pared back initial China/Hong Kong "reopening" gains experienced at the tail end of 2022.

We sold our position in Align Technology, the global leader in clear aligners, taking advantage of its significant year-to-date rebound (up almost 50% in USD). We have conducted extensive due diligence on the name in recent quarters, including attending the International Dental Show in Cologne in March, and concluded that the company is too complacent regarding upcoming competition. We reduced our positions in Alphabet (on slowing growth and potential advertising market share erosion), Tencent (to better reflect our conviction overall versus the wider portfolio), Housing Development Finance Corporation "HDHC" (due to higher complexity and lower visibility of earnings post the impending merger with HDHC Bank) and lastly Church & Dwight as well as Hoya (both on valuation grounds). The proceeds were used to reinforce our positions in Lonza, Adyen, Recruit and S&P Global all on attractive valuations as we build these positions for the long-term. We also initiated positions in Zoetis (leading animal healthcare provider) and Accenture (premier IT Services consultant).

We highlight a recent ESG engagement held with Daikin, a leading global air conditioner manufacturer, sharing best practices and encouraging greater board diversity. We also followed up on environmental issues such as continued innovation and regulatory investigations.

The aggregate portfolio remains robust and well positioned with strong balance sheets, profitability and double-digit growth expectations over the long-term. Whilst uncertainty remains, we continue to trust in the quintessential quality growth profile that our clients and trusted partners have come to expect – that being favourable risk-adjusted absolute performance at or below levels of market volatility for the long-term through most market conditions.
