* Source : Amundi. The above cover complete periods of 12 months for each calendar year. Past performance is no predictor of current and future results and does not guarantee future yield. Any losses or gains do not take into consideration any costs, commissions and fees incurred by the investor in the issue and buyout of the shares (e.g. taxes, brokerage fees or other commissions deducted by the financial intermediary). If performance is calculated in a currency other than the euro, any losses or gains generated can thereby be affected by exchange rate fluctuations (both upward and downward). The discrepancy accounts for the performance difference between the portfolio and the index.

Risk & Reward Profile (SRRI)

Lower risk, potentially lower rewards

Higher risk, potentially higher rewards

The SRRI represents the risk and return profile as presented in the Key Investor Information Document (KIID). The lowest category does not imply that there is no risk. The SRRI is not guaranteed and may change over time.

Volatility

	1 year	3 years	5 years
Portfolio volatility	9.23%	16.42%	15.73%

Volatility is a statistical indicator that measures an asset's variations around its average value. For example, market variations of +/- 1.5% per day correspond to a volatility of 25% per year.

Management commentary

The US indices ended the last month of the year up by slightly less than their average monthly performance in 2017. The S&P500 (+1.1%) recorded a performance in line with the MSCI World (+1.1%) and its ninth consecutive monthly gain while the Dow Jones (+1.9%) outperformed slightly thanks to Boeing (+6.5%). The Nasdaq (+0.5%) underperformed very slightly. The gains occurred mainly during the first half of the month when the necessary consensus within the Republican party for adoption of the tax reform began to emerge. The two main hiccups during the fortnight also had political connotations. The first arose when Michael Flynn, fleetingly Donald Trump's Security Advisor, admitted that he had lied to the FBI during its investigation of contacts with Russian representatives, thereby rekindling fears regarding the White House's ability to implement its policy. The second arose when two Republican senators threatened not to support the projected tax reform unless certain provisions were amended. After December 18, when Congress and the Senate agreed on a common text, the markets trod water. The Fed's expected decision to raise the Fed Funds rate by 0.25% (to 1.25%-1.50%) had not visible impact. The strongest performers with the S&P were basic materials (+14.1%), telecoms (+5.3%) and media (+3.6%). Basic materials benefited from the rise in metals prices (copper +7.2%, steel +10.6%, industrial metals +8%) after good monthly figures for Chinese imports and the constant support of a weak dollar (-1% against all currencies). The telecoms companies welcomed the FCC's decision to scrap net neutrality, which guaranteed that Internet access providers would treat all data flows the same. AT&T ended the month up by +6.9% and Verizon rose by +4%. The media sector was boosted by M&A activity with Walt Disney (+2.6%) announcing the take over of some assets from 21st Century-Fox (+8.1%) including National Geographic and the film studios. Comcast (+6.7%) definitively through in the towel. Oil stocks (+5%) also performed well, boosted by rising oil prices (WTI +5.3%). Banks (+2.2%) welcome the adoption of the tax reform. Conversely, interest-rate sensitive sectors underperformed (utilities -6.2% and real estate -0.8%). The utilities sector was also hurt by the strong falls recorded by PG&E (-17.4%) and Edison International (-22.2%), after allegations of responsibility for starting the forest fires in California. Healthcare (-0.8%) was also the scene of financial deals, with the agreement reached for the takeover of Aetna (+0.1%), third-largest health insurer in the US, by CVS Health (-5.4%) for USD69 billion. In terms of individual stocks, Apple shed 1.5% due to fears of slower than expected demand for iPhone X, nourished by the Taiwanese press, and due to the polemic relating to the company's management of the performances of some of its products to avoid the batteries running out too fast. Boeing (+6.5%) is going to increase its quarterly dividend by 20% and replace its present securities buyback program by a new program for USD 18 billion, thereby closing a striking annual performance (+90%).
