INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE

The fund aims to provide equity-type returns with less-than-commensurate risk and to outperform its benchmark over a full market cycle. The fund targets balanced convertibles that are expected to provide both meaningful downside protection if equities weaken and upside participation if the underlying shares appreciate. The fund's investments are concentrated on convertibles securities outside of the United States.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY¹

Global ex-U.S. equity markets performed well in March as favorable economic data buoyed risk sentiment. Against this backdrop, stocks in all regions generated gains, led by those in Japan and Europe. By sector, energy was the best performer due to stronger commodity prices. The global convertible primary market activity remained strong in March, with $10.8 billion coming to market across 18 new deals. Although most of the issuance was concentrated in the United States, the new deals were well-diversified by sector. As always, we continue to evaluate each new deal on a case-by-case basis. We continue to believe that convertibles are a conservative way to gain equity market exposure. As we've noted previously, we think elevated borrowing costs in the traditional bond market may encourage issuers to turn to convertibles. Thus, our market has the potential to grow over time. Additionally, we believe the convertibles market has become more attractive over the last year, as rising interest rates have led to a meaningful increase in coupons as well as positive yields. Absolute performance will still depend on the returns of the underlying equities, so we continue to focus on high-quality companies with (a) underlying stocks that are trading at reasonable valuations with good long-term growth prospects and (b) convertible structures with a favorable risk/return profile. The Fund generated a gain in March and outperformed its benchmark. Our holdings across all regions positively impacted our absolute returns, led by those in Europe (mostly France and Italy). At the sector level, our holdings within industrials and consumer discretionary contributed the most to our absolute performance. No sectors meaningfully detracted. On a relative basis, our security selection in Europe (notably Germany and France) positively impacted our returns, while our selection in Japan detracted. At the sector level, our security selection among industrials (aerospace and defense) and financials (banks and capital markets) contributed positively, while our selection among information technology had a negative effect.
