Market Review

Fed tightening finally broke something. The sudden collapse of Silicon Valley Bank clearly exposed the significant systemic interest rate risk built over a generation of easy monetary policy. Banking system pressure and mixed economic readings translated to investor flight from banking and other cyclicals to treasuries, defensive equities and IT growth stocks. The benchmark’s financial sector declined -11.26% while information technology increased 6.87%. The Russell 1000 Growth index returned 6.84% vs. -0.40% for the Russell Value index as investors ignored broad earnings deterioration and focused on the US Treasury Ten Year’s 50bps decline.

Fund Review

The fund increased 1.3% in March vs. -0.8% for the MSCI USA Value index.

At the sector level, monthly relative attribution contribution was led by stock selection in Financials (2.01%), Communication Services (0.39%), and Information Technology (0.33%). The largest March laggards were stock selection in Healthcare (-0.39%) and Industrials (-0.39%), and zero allocation to outperforming Utilities (-0.30%).

At the stock level, the top relative attribution contributors for March were Berkshire Hathaway (0.58%), Novartis (0.50%), Microsoft (0.38%), Markel (0.37%) and Fiserv (0.32%). The largest detractors were CVS (-0.42%), Advance Auto Parts (-0.41%), MillerKnoll (-0.39%), Centene (-0.31%) and Smith & Nephew (-0.11%).

We trimmed Valvoline and Booking Holdings given their recent relative outperformance and lower Favorability Ratios than at purchase. The investment team constantly evaluates holdings and potential candidates based on Favorability Ratios, or the upside % return potential vs. the downside % return potential. We believe an equal focus on managing the downside and upside is always important, but especially during adverse markets. We continue to position the portfolio with companies that generally have Favorability Ratios of > 3-to-1 and higher than average earnings predictability.

Outlook

Risks: We believe investors are not fully discounting the risks of earnings deterioration in 2023 and may be too confident about economic conditions given the banking strain and its impact on credit. As we warned in 2021 and early 2022, S&P 500 net margins were unsustainably high (>13%) in the pandemic and are now normalizing. As of Q4 2022, they had returned to pre-pandemic levels (10.9%), but remain elevated versus a post millennium average of 7.75%. Meanwhile, core inflation remains elevated as does labor strength. Multiples have risen smartly off their fall 2022 bottoms and also present downside risk.

Opportunities: P/E dispersion, still on par with levels last seen during the 2000 tech bubble, presents a compelling investment opportunity for value stocks. Meanwhile, quality value (low EPS volatility) should mitigate the risk of traditional value stocks’ (e.g. Energy, Financials, Materials) high operating leverage in a slowing 2023 global economy. Banking stocks remain concerning.
