FUND COMMENTARY

Asian markets continued their weakness into the new year driven mostly by China, where investors were disappointed by a slow recovery, and Korea, which is experiencing particular weakness in electric vehicle (EV) battery chain related companies. Japan was strong on a relative basis but continued to see large swings between Value and large cap focused moves as US yields rebounded somewhat, and strong days for Growth, especially in technology stocks.

Encouraging indications from the world's largest chipmaker, TSMC, about demand inflecting and semiconductor equipment spending perhaps growing, with a focus on sophisticated processes, strengthens our case for technology companies such as Lasertec. However, some profit-taking weighed early in the year for Shin-Etsu Chemical.

At the same time, Fast Retailing, a top contributor to portfolio performance, saw strength in China where the company again seems to have found a consumer stratum which is growing strongly even while the overall Chinese consumer story is ambiguous. Excellent earnings supported Fast Retailing's share price and reminded us that the China opportunity must be analysed company by company. Keyence, another top contributor, looks to be benefiting from indications of capital expenditure upturn in China.

China recovered somewhat intra-month driven by deeply oversold conditions and policy support headlines. Reports that Jack Ma had been buying Alibaba, combined with China's gaming regulator taking down video game draft rules it recently announced, helped bolster sentiment and saw NetEase trade higher.

HDFC Bank detracted from performance in January. The company surprised the market as its loan-to-deposit ratio (LDR) spiked to 110% post-merger, compared to an average of 85-87% pre-merger. It is imperative that the LDR is normalised for the company to return to its historical profitability and returns. This will entail HDFC Bank significantly accelerating its deposit mobilisation or cutting back on growth.

On outlook, the Tokyo Stock Exchange published a long-awaited list of governance improvement responses by companies. However, this theme had already pushed higher share prices of low price-to-book companies last year, and we suggest that investors' focus should shift to whether companies are 'doing' and not merely 'saying'. We believe that Hitachi remains a company which has effected real change, probably for its own reasons rather than in response to regulators.

The views expressed in this document are valid at the time of publication only, do not constitute independent investment research and should not be interpreted as investment advice.
