FUND COMMENTARY

Asian markets were strong in the month of February, with China and Korea leading the pack. There is an increased perception that the Chinese government wants to support equity markets with anecdotal evidence of buying by state-owned funds and enterprises. The key reference rate for mortgages has been cut by 25bps and data coming from the Chinese New Year holiday suggests an upturn in consumption-related areas such as domestic travel. While there has been no 'bazooka' stimulus as we have seen in past, the steady measures by the Chinese government along with cheap valuations suggest that the market could stage a rebound. Your portfolio is overweight China, reflecting a number of reasonably valued strong franchises we have found in this market.

Korea staged a rally as the authorities talked about several minority friendly measures which could help improve corporate governance and reduce the 'Korea' discount. Our exposure is more towards companies with steadier corporate governance, although we have occasionally been blindsided as was the case with Orion Corp which announced an unrelated acquisition earlier in the year.

Our Chinese holdings in the consumer sector performed well over the month, as illustrated by Vipshop and NetEase. Vipshop's Q4 results were very strong, with a robust beat on consensus expectations. The stock has seen consistent earnings upgrades over past year as it benefits from consumer downtrading. NetEase has continued to improve its Games portfolio over the year and offers a strong launch pipeline for the upcoming quarters.

TSMC was the portfolio's top contributor over the month. The company continues to perform well, particularly helped by strong Nvidia results where TSMC is a key supplier and hence a direct beneficiary.

Bandhan Bank's share price suffered a double-digit decline. The company's quarterly numbers continue to disappoint, leading to earnings downgrades. Bandhan also announced that one of its government guarantee schemes is under audit by the relevant government agency which has further soured sentiment.

Tokai Carbon saw a pull back after memory players lowered the pace of resumption of production growth in NAND. We still believe that the company will see sequential recovery in revenues, with better growth in H2'24 as its new tantalum carbide products enter the market.
