Quarterly comment

The ABN AMRO Parnassus U.S. ESG Equities Fund slightly underperformed the MSCI USA during the first quarter. While sector allocation was a tailwind, stock selection detracted from performance. Within sector allocation, our underweight to Consumer Discretionary contributed the most, while a lack of exposure to Energy detracted. Stock selection boosted relative performance in Information Technology but had a negative impact in Communication Services. Within stock selection, the three greatest contributors were Apple, Oracle and Applied Materials. The three largest detractors were Charter Communications, Intel and Roche Holding. We sold our positions in Canadian Pacific Kansas City, Gilead Sciences and Texas Instruments and added new positions in Broadcom, Micron Technology, Realty Income and Verizon Communications. The strategy exited the quarter most overweight in Financials followed by Materials. The largest underweights were Consumer Discretionary and Health Care. We continue to take a balanced approach to portfolio positioning as the market seems increasingly confident in a soft landing, where the economy moderates but doesn't enter a recession and inflation continues to trend lower over time. As such, we remain overweight in the competitively advantaged, increasingly relevant businesses positioned to outperform over the long term, while remaining disciplined on valuation. We have decided not to shift to an overly offensive stance, due to the lack of compellingly priced risk we see in the market. However, we are not pivoting in an overly defensive direction either, given the multitude of supportive factors evident in the economic data and the fact that we continue to see strong demand, impending fiscal and monetary support in an election year and strong secular earnings growth drivers that we believe to be durable (for example, continued digitization and adoption of AI across sectors). We expect macro volatility to continue in the near term as we see more data, but we remain focused on positioning the portfolio for success in the long term.
