FUND COMMENTARY

The month of August saw solid earnings releases from many of our investee companies, with teens profit growth in currency-adjusted EBITDA. Two such examples were Daikin and Keyence. At the same time, there was a disappointing share price reaction to many such releases, perhaps reflecting not fundamentals but rather market rotation factors and a preference for firms which are going through significant restructuring or talking about it.

Technology and China automation demand are giving mixed signals. Whilst some of our semiconductor or electronic components holdings are still reacting to customer inventory normalisation, they are between hopeful and very optimistic about a recovery later in the calendar year. Fanuc spoke cautiously about China demand, but this commentary may reflect its exposure to a few large clients in the country.

The removal of group travel restrictions from China should be a boon for investee companies benefitting from physical traffic, such as Fast Retailing. We believe that effect has not yet been reflected in the share price.

The initial rebound of Japan's market this year has driven large capital flows into certain themes like monetary policy beneficiaries (the Bank of Japan changed Yield Curve Control implementation in July but reiterated the policy itself), artificial intelligence related companies and restructuring or potential restructuring stories. The more detailed work to discover excellent companies growing strongly and discounted to global peers is yet to come, we believe, and when it does our portfolio should be a natural winner. Earnings releases like those we saw this month proved the health and strategy of our portfolio holdings quite uniformly, and we are confident that the market will evaluate these features.
