Rolling 12-month-performance

Source: Bellevue Asset Management, 30.11.2023; all figures in EUR %, total return / BVI-methodology

Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future results and can be misleading. As the fund is denominated in a currency that may differ than an investor's base currency, changes in the rate of exchange may have an adverse effect on prices and incomes. Performance is shown net of fees and expenses for the relevant share class over the reference period. All performance figures reflect the reinvestment of dividends and do not take into account the commissions and costs incurred on the issue and redemption of shares, if any. Individual costs are not taken into account and would have a negative impact on the performance. With an investment amount of EUR 1,000 over an investment period of five years, the investment result in the first year would be reduced by the front-end load of up to EUR 50 (5%) as well as by additional individual custody charges. In subsequent years, the investment result would also be reduced by the individual custody account costs incurred. The reference benchmark of this class is used for performance comparison purposes only (dividend reinvested). No benchmark is directly identical to a fund, thus the performance of a benchmark is not a reliable indicator of future performance of the fund to which it is compared. There can be no assurance that a return will be achieved or that a substantial loss of capital will not be incurred.

Market review

Global stocks (MSCI World Net Index +9.4%) and the US tech sector (Nasdaq 100 +10.8%) delivered very pleasing returns in November. The broader healthcare sector (MSCI World Healthcare Net +5.7%) also delivered a positive return but was not quite as strong, while the Bellevue Digital Health Fund (+16.9%) ended the month with a stellar performance. Stock market gains were fueled by the largest one-month drop in bond yields since the financial crisis. 10-year treasury yields slumped about 70 basis points from their intra-month peak and closed at 4.33%. Falling bond yields benefited growth stocks the most, also in the digital health sector.

Medtech stocks also gained after Novo Nordisk published detailed data from its SELECT trial. In August 2023, the publication of initial data (headline results) from the SELECT trial led to considerable uncertainty for digital health investors and steep losses as well. The detailed results that were published last month showed that GLP-1 treatment was indeed effective in patients with pre-existing cardiovascular disease, but they also revealed that GLP-1 therapy might have an only marginal impact on business in the digital medtech market in the mid to long term, and maybe even a positive impact in the short term. A graying population is accelerating sector growth far more than the projected temporary effect GLP-1 medications might have in reducing the prevalence of certain diseases. Consequently, the lower mortality rate shown in the SELECT trial should actually have a positive effect on underlying market growth. Furthermore, in market segments where technology penetration rates are still very low (e.g. 5% market penetration of insulin pumps in type 2 diabetes), the digital health industry should be able to take potentially slower market growth years from now in stride.

Among the portfolio holdings that delivered a very good performance against this backdrop were Insulet (+42.6%), Natera (+41.8%), Pacific Biosciences (+37.2%), Dexcom (+30.0%), Intuitive Surgical (+18.5%), Penumbra (+16.2%) und Axonics (+9.3%). The third-quarter results and full-year outlooks presented by TransMedics (+101.9%) and Procept BioRobotics (+34.4%) were much better than expected. Sales from TransMedics' new, transplant-related aviation activities that became operational at mid-year and the initial acquisition of customers for its comprehensive transplant offerings including air logistics led to a seismic shift in the previously highly negative sentiment toward the company's new business model. Many investors now acknowledge the company's unique competitive advantage. Procept BioRobotics shares surged after the company reported higher-than-expected average selling prices and launched a clinical trial for resection/removal of prostate tissue in patients with localized prostate cancer using the company's AquaBeam Robotic System. If the trial demonstrates that aquablation therapy is safe and effective for removing prostate tissue in patients diagnosed with localized prostate cancer, the company's addressable market could more than double in very little time. Since the procedure is the same used in the current therapy to treat benign prostate tumors, we believe the probability of a successful trial outcome is very high.

Shockwave (-17.8%) hurt portfolio performance after the US health insurer Aetna said it was now requiring prior authorization for interventions using Shockwave's IVL catheter balloon systems. Veeva (-12.2%) traded lower due to budget cuts at biopharmaceutical companies and at Omnicell (-6.1%) sales growth was hurt as hospitals held back on modernizing existing drug management systems. All performance data is in USD / B shares.

Positioning & outlook

Many digital health companies are anticipating strong sales growth for the fourth quarter of 2023. We were able to verify this assessment in our talks with executives from 7 of our top 10 portfolio holdings at an investor conference in New York in November. A few companies have already made positive comments about 2024, thanks in large part to the expected approval and launch of major new products. Examples here are Insulet's Omnipod 5 patch insulin pump, Dexcom's G7 continuous glucose monitor, and the expected launch of Intuitive Surgical's next generation Da Vinci robot.

As the 2023 investment year has clearly shown, outstanding sector-specific fundamentals can be overridden by macroeconomic developments and shifting investor tastes. Unlike in 2023, we are anticipating tailwinds for our investment solution in 2024: Lower interest rates in the US (which will clearly benefit growth stocks), attractive valuation levels (price/sales close to historical lows), a projected upturn in M&A and IPO activity, a general shift from high-flying stocks ("Magnificent 7") towards quality stocks, and a soft outlook for the world economy (which in the past has been a relatively good environment for non-cyclical sectors such as the digital health sector).

Our investment strategy is focused on innovative market leaders and companies with solid finances. More than 95% of the companies in the portfolio have no immediate funding needs. Companies in the highly regulated and non-cyclical healthcare market also benefit from the industry's high entry barriers. The portfolio consists of fast-growing companies that are using digital technology to improve healthcare delivery and outcomes and make healthcare systems more cost-effective. Average sales growth for the digital health portfolio over the coming years is in the high double-digits and visibility is good.

Risk and return profile acc. to SRI

The Fund's investment objective is to generate attractive and competitive capital growth in the long term. It is therefore particularly suited to investors with an investment horizon of at least 5 years who want to selectively diversify their portfolio with investments in companies whose business activities have a strong focus on the digitalization of the healthcare sector and who are willing to accept the equity risk typical of this sector.

We have rated this product as risk class 6 on a scale of 1 to 7, with 6 being the second highest risk class. The risk of potential losses from future performance is considered high. In the event of very adverse market conditions, it is very likely that the ability to execute your redemption request will be impaired. The calculation of the risk and earnings profile is based on simulated/historical data, which cannot be used as a reliable indication of the future risk profile. The classification of the fund may change in future and does not constitute a guarantee. Even a fund classed in category 1 does not constitute a completely risk-free investment. There can be no guarantee that a return will be achieved or that a substantial loss of capital will not be incurred. The overall risk exposure may have a strong impact on any return achieved by the fund or subfund. For further information please refer to the fund prospectus or PRIIP-KID.

Liquidity risk

The fund may invest some of its assets in financial instruments that may in certain circumstances reach a relatively low level of liquidity, which can have an impact on the fund's liquidity.

Risk arising from the use of derivatives

The fund may conclude derivatives transactions. This increases opportunities, but also involves an increased risk of loss.

Currency risks

The fund may invest in assets denominated in a foreign currency. Changes in the rate of exchange may have an adverse effect on prices and incomes.

Operational risks and custody risks

The fund is subject to risks due to operational or human errors, which can arise at the investment company, the custodian bank, a custodian or other third parties.
