What does the indicator mean?

The risk indicator is a measure of the risk which you run when you invest in the Fund. The indicator is based on the volatility of the share price of the Fund over the last five years. The volatility means to which extent the price has risen and fallen. As a general rule, you have to run greater risk to potentially achieve a higher return. Note that a classification in the first category does not mean that you do not run any risk.

Why is this fund in category 6?

The Fund primarily invests in equities that are in general more volatile than bonds and money market instruments. The risk is therefore higher.

Attention:

The indicator is based on historical data over the past five years.

Historical figures do not always offer a reliable indication of the future risk profile of the Fund. The risk profile and, consequently, this classification of the Fund are not definite and can change.

Other particular risks

There are various risks with potential impact on the Fund performance which are not fully captured by the risk-reward indicator.

Currency risk

The Fund may invest in assets denominated in other currencies than the Euro. Fluctuations in the exchange rates may affect the value of the investments of the Fund.

Performance fees and transaction costs are not included, unless it concerns entry and exit charges that were paid by the Fund when participations in another investment company were purchased or sold.
