Financial review Q4 2020

Market developments

Global equity markets extended their upward trend during the final quarter of the year, mostly as a result of positive vaccine developments and more stimulus hope. In December, most developed markets gave regulatory approval to one or several vaccines and started the rollout. This reduced investor fears over COVID-19 upsurges and prolonged lockdown measures, which had initially triggered a sell-off in October. While business activity globally appeared to hold up well during new rounds of restrictions, European services sector activity did deteriorate. Late December, a new and more infectious virus mutation discovered in the UK made European countries consider further lockdown measures. This did not affect the upbeat investor sentiment.

Besides the vaccine rollout, important developments that contributed to the positive investor sentiment were: Joe Biden's US presidential election win and the agreement on a new US fiscal stimulus package; the long-awaited conclusion of a Brexit trade deal between the UK and the EU; and the launch of an additional EUR 500 billion stimulus package by the European Central Bank (ECB). European government bond yields moved lower on the back of this new monetary stimulus and continued low inflation expectations. The general increase in risk appetite also led to a decline in eurozone investment-grade corporate yields.

Portfolio developments

Sentiment in the financial markets got boosted by the positive news flows regarding COVID-19 vaccines. Especially, sectors related to a more normalising economy, such as Energy and Financials, performed extremely well, while more defensive sectors like Consumer Staples and Health Care were clearly lagging. The large fiscal and monetary stimulus packages have kept both interest rates and risk premiums low and as

William de Vries

Fund Manager

"Market returns this quarter were determined by hope and fear; fear for the repercussions of COVID-19, Brexit and the US elections and hope on the development of a vaccine and adequate government support policies. And hope prevailed, as most vaccine programs already started before year end" a result all bond markets performed well in the fourth quarter. The fund remains defensively positioned defensively with an underweight position in equities and an overweight position in high-quality bonds.

Companies added to the portfolio during the quarter:

Equities

- Nomad Foods, a globally leading British frozen food company, was added as part of the Sustainable Food and Agriculture theme. Nomad Foods is increasingly focusing on offering healthy frozen meals and meat replacement products such as peas, fish, vegetables and potato-related products. Nomad has a sustainability program to secure a "farm to fork" approach, i.e. responsible sourcing, responsible nutrition and responsible operations.
- Roland Corp, a Japanese musical instruments manufacturer, was added as part of the Prosperous and Healthy People theme. Roland has an electronic-only musical instrument offering (especially synthesizers, drums and piano's) and is increasingly focusing on providing software services and solutions to facilitate musical performances on social platforms.

Bonds

- The fund invested in multiple newly issued social bonds from the European Commission, issued under the EU SURE programme. The proceeds will be used to provide financial assistance to member States to tackle the economic disturbance caused by the COVID-19 outbreak. The aim of the bond is to reduce the risk of unemployment and loss of income. The social bonds are classified under our Social Inclusion theme.
- The fund also participated in the newly issued green bonds from grid operators Fluvius and TenneT. We have classified the bond of TenneT as a regular corporate bond due to the long lookback period of eligible projects under the green bond framework. The bonds are qualified under the theme of Sustainable Mobility and Infrastructure.

Companies sold during the quarter:

Equities

- Positions in German enterprise software company SAP, Japanese car component OEM supplier Denso and Spanish fashion retailer Inditex were sold. For all three companies the main drivers were performance and/or valuation. Moreover, for Inditex the thematic fit was considered too thin.

Bonds

- Unibail Rodamco was removed, based on the deteriorated outlook for the commercial real estate sector.

Performance analysis

The fund generated a return of 2.5%, while the benchmark yielded 3.3%. Both the allocation and selection effect were negative. The allocation effect was negative as a result of our underweight position in equity and overweight position in cash. The focus on higher quality bonds was the driver for the negative selection effect. The currency effect was positive.

Investment outlook

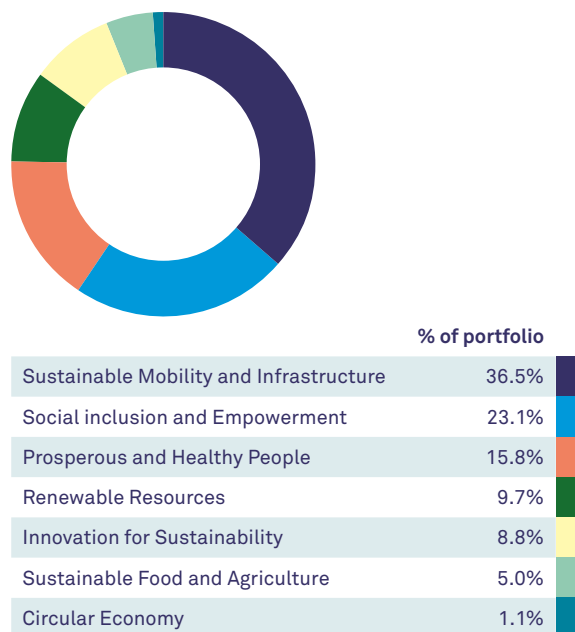

- Although vaccines will be rolled out in most developed markets, the coronavirus will likely continue to surge in both Europe and the US throughout most of the first quarter of 2021. Pre-pandemic economic activity levels can only be reached once a vaccine has become widely available, which we do not expect to happen before the end of 2021;
- This means that the global economic recovery will find it difficult to fully lift off in the first quarter of 2021;
- Weak demand will likely remain the dominant force influencing inflation and monetary and fiscal policies will remain extremely accommodative.
- Government bond yields are near historic lows. Low eurozone inflation expectations and subdued economic growth prospects will likely force the ECB to remain accommodative. This will keep European government bond yields low for longer;
- The same goes for yields on credits, which are heavily supported by central bank purchases;
- We prefer high-quality credits with strong balance sheets, as the dreadful growth environment is likely to trigger a rise in downgrades;
- We therefore maintain a neutral position in bonds.
- Because of last quarter's rally, equity valuations have become even more elevated in relation to earnings power. The US equity market continues to look most expensive on a variety of metrics, while European and Asian markets look cheap relative to the US;
- Earnings estimates have declined, but we think that the anticipated broad and firm earnings recovery in 2021 is unrealistic. Negative earnings surprises are lurking, in which case lower equity prices and valuations would be justified;

- We assume that central banks cannot keep financial assets inflated forever.
- We therefore remain underweight in equities.

Sustainability in the spotlight Sustainable Mobility and Infrastructure

The fund invests in seven transition themes that are key to helping society overcome systematic sustainability challenges. In the below case study on Fluvius, we zoom in to the theme 'Sustainable Mobility and Infrastructure'. Learn more about how we invest in this theme here.

Case Study: Fluvius

Fluvius is a multi-utility company in Flanders. It provides grid-based services such as the distribution of electricity and gas, public lighting, sewerage, cable television infrastructure and fibre-to-the-home grids. Fluvius has the mission to sustainably connect society to its grids and the target to be carbon-neutral by 2050. To align with its sustainability strategy, the company has recently issued a green bond. The proceeds of the bond are used for digital metering of electricity, switching to LED in public lighting, upgrading sewerage grids and expanding electricity grids to facilitate renewable energy generation. Thereby, the green bond leads to avoided CO₂ emissions through energy efficiency, more renewable energy generation and clean water sources. It also contributes to building future-proof grids and to Fluvius' pivotal role in the energy transition.

Active engagement with companies in portfolio

In Q4, an engagement project on climate change was initiated with the long-term goal to urge companies with high carbon emissions to limit global warming impact to 1.5°C, by 2030. To reach this goal, companies were urged to setting science-based targets for greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions reduction, supported by an effective transition plan and reporting on progress.

The pharmaceutical company Merck Kgaa had previously set the absolute GHG emission reduction target of 20% by 2020 (base year 2006). In a call with Merck Kgaa in December, the significant growth of the company and the acquisition of Versum were given as an explanation as to why only a 15% reduction was achieved. Process improvements and new technologies to curb the company's high emissions will be key for Merck's stated ambition to set science-based targets in the future.

The Swiss healthcare company Roche has set the objective to have zero emissions by 2050 and reduce the environmental impact of its operations and products by 50% from 2020-2029 (base year 2019). The publicly disclosed sub-target entails the reduction of total scope 1 and 2 greenhouse gas emissions in terms of kg CO₂/employee by 40% until 2025. In a call, Roche explained that the additional implicit reduction target of greenhouse gas emissions resulting from the eco-balance goal is roughly a 75% reduction until 2029.
