Terms to understand

- Share Financial security corresponding to a share in the capital of a company and generally providing a right to dividend.
- Derivative instrument Any financial security whose value is linked to one or more interest rates, indices, shares, currencies, commodities or other underlying value.

Risk and reward profile

- The value of an investment in a sub-fund increases or decreases over time. At the time of resale, the price of your shares may fall below the original price and incur a loss. If you invest in a sub-fund whose currency is different from yours, changes in exchange rates can also reduce your gains or increase your losses.
- The risk level above is calculated on the basis of the sub-fund's volatility over the medium term (i.e. on the basis of the actual changes in its value over the last five years or a simulation, if the sub-fund was created within that period). The volatility of the sub-fund may increase or decrease over time, and thus possibly change its risk level.
- The sub-fund's risk level reflects the following factor(s):
 - Investments in equities have a higher volatility and degree of risk than bonds and monetary instruments.
 - The concentration of investments in a single sector or industry contributes to increasing the risk level of the sub-fund.

The risk level does not reflect the potential impact of unusual market conditions or unforeseen events that can amplify risks or trigger other risks such as:

- Liquidity risk Some financial securities may be impossible to sell quickly at a given instant or may have to be sold at a discount.
- Management risk Under abnormal market conditions, the usual management techniques may be ineffective or unfavourable.
- Derivative risk Some derivatives may increase the volatility of the sub-fund or expose the sub-fund to losses that are higher than the price of the derivatives.
- Concentration risk Where the sub-fund concentrates its investments on one country (or one region or sector) that is affected by an adverse event, its value may fall.
- Counterparty risk The sub-fund can lose money as a result of the failure of a market player with which it does business.
