Rolling 12-month-performance

Source: Bellevue Asset Management, 29.02.2024; all figures in EUR %, total return / BVI-methodology
Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future results and can be misleading. As the fund is denominated in a currency that may differ than an investor's base currency, changes in the rate of exchange may have an adverse effect on prices and incomes. Performance is shown net of fees and expenses for the relevant share class over the reference period. All performance figures reflect the reinvestment of dividends and do not take into account the commissions and costs incurred on the issue and redemption of shares, if any. Individual costs are not taken into account and would have a negative impact on the performance. With an investment amount of EUR 1,000 over an investment period of five years, the investment result in the first year would be reduced by the front-end load of up to EUR 50 (5%) as well as by additional individual custody charges. In subsequent years, the investment result would also be reduced by the individual custody account costs incurred. The reference benchmark of this class is used for performance comparison purposes only (dividend reinvested). No benchmark is directly identical to a fund, thus the performance of a benchmark is not a reliable indicator of future performance of the fund to which it is compared. There can be no assurance that a return will be achieved or that a substantial loss of capital will not be incurred.

Market review

Global stocks marched higher in February (MSCI World Net Index +4.7%), as did European stocks (Euro Stoxx 50 +5.1%) and Germany's bellwether index (DAX +4.6%). The broad healthcare index (MSCI World Healthcare Net +2.7%) and the medtech sector (MSCI World Healthcare Equipment & Supplies +3.0%) also closed the month in clearly positive territory, as did the Bellevue Medtech & Services Fund (+3.5%), and ahead of its benchmark as well.

The relevant medtech markets have shown very pleasing growth. Besides the numerous new or recently launched market-expanding products with blockbuster potential, all the procedures that had to be postponed during the pandemic will give volume growth in 2024 an additional boost. Medtech companies are therefore expected to report a big acceleration in growth this year. Excellent fourth-quarter results and optimistic outlooks for 2024 underpin that assessment. Not only that, the large medtech players have rock-solid balance sheets and sector valuations are still modest, so we expect M&A activity to pick up. Given the typically substantial takeover synergies in this sector, the stock prices of acquiring companies should trade higher, too.

Large-cap medtech stocks were conspicuous performance drivers for the fund in February: GE Healthcare (+25.0%), Alcon (+12.3%), Idexx Laboratories (+12.2%), Edwards Lifesciences (+8.7%), Abbott (+5.3%), Boston Scientific (+5.1%) and Stryker (+4.5%). GE Healthcare beat consensus sales and profit estimates. The company is a leader in integrating artificial intelligence (AI) into medical technology systems and it has accumulated the most FDA approvals for AI-powered medtech products (58). Alcon's fourth-quarter results were better than expected. Reported growth for both sales, fueled by new, innovative contact lenses, and profits surprised to the upside. Edwards Lifesciences received FDA approval for its Evoque heart valve replacement system much sooner than expected. Evoque is the first transcatheter therapy to receive approval for the treatment of tricuspid regurgitation. Insulet (-13.7%) and Penumbra (-6.4%) did not quite meet high investor expectations and had a negative impact on portfolio performance.

Most of the healthcare services providers traded higher in February. For instance HCA Healthcare (+2.7%), the largest US hospital chain, and Privia (+11.2%), which has developed a physician-focused platform that improves healthcare delivery for care providers and patients. The performance of US health insurers was mixed. Cigna (+12.2%), Molina (+11.0%), Centene (+4.6%) and Elevance (+2.1%) made positive contributions to performance, while Humana (-6.9%) and UnitedHealth (-3.1%) were performance detractors. Cigna, a US health insurer focused on employer-sponsored plans, beat consensus earnings estimates by a mile thanks to a drop in medical costs and raised its earnings guidance for 2024. Shares of the largest US health insurer UnitedHealth came under pressure in late February after the Wall Street Journal wrote that the Department of Justice (DOJ) had launched an antitrust investigation into the company. The DOJ has allegedly inquired about relationships between UnitedHealth Group's subsidiaries UnitedHealthcare (health insurer) and Optum Health (services provider) and is probing past acquisitions of doctor groups and how they have affected competition. The Biden administration's aggressive stance towards market leaders in various industries does not come as a surprise to us during this presidential election year, and we assume this will be an only temporary phenomenon. All performance data is in EUR / B shares.

Positioning & outlook

From a fundamental standpoint, medtech companies and hospital operators have been on a stable, above-average growth trajectory since the summer of 2023 and this trend should continue in 2024. The medtech sector's good sales growth will also be fueled by the approval and launch of relevant new products.

We expect hospitals operators to benefit from the ongoing recovery of surgical procedure volumes and from slower wage growth in the nursing field. In the health insurance space, we expect premium volumes to show very good growth, fueled by a steady increase in membership numbers and higher-than-average rate increases. We expect another significant increase in premium rates for 2025, which should have a positive impact on insurers' sales and earnings growth. Political risks remain low. Either Biden or Trump will win the White House and we assume that no party will have a solid majority in either chamber of Congress after the elections.

Unlike in 2023, we are anticipating tailwinds for our investment solution in 2024: Rate cuts by the Fed, attractive valuation levels (valued at a discount despite above-average earnings growth), a general repositioning as investors drop last year's outperformers and move into high-quality stocks, and a meager outlook for global economic growth (which in the past has been good for non-cyclical sectors). All of these factors argue for an investment in the Bellevue Medtech & Services (Lux) Fund.

Risk and return profile acc. to SRI

The Fund's investment objective is to generate attractive and competitive capital growth in the long term. It is therefore particularly suited to investors with an investment horizon of at least 5 years who want to selectively diversify their portfolio with investments in the medical technology sector and who are willing to accept the equity risks typical of this sector.

We have classified this product as risk class 5 on a scale of 1 to 7, where 5 corresponds to a medium-high risk class. The risk of potential losses from future performance is classified as medium-high. In the event of very adverse market conditions, it is likely that the ability to execute your redemption request will be impaired. The calculation of the risk and earnings profile is based on simulated/historical data, which cannot be used as a reliable indication of the future risk profile. The classification of the fund may change in future and does not constitute a guarantee. Even a fund classed in category 1 does not constitute a completely risk-free investment. There can be no guarantee that a return will be achieved or that a substantial loss of capital will not be incurred. The overall risk exposure may have a strong impact on any return achieved by the fund or subfund. For further information please refer to the fund prospectus or PRIIP-KID.

Liquidity risk

The fund may invest some of its assets in financial instruments that may in certain circumstances reach a relatively low level of liquidity, which can have an impact on the fund's liquidity.

Risk arising from the use of derivatives

The fund may conclude derivatives transactions. This increases opportunities, but also involves an increased risk of loss.

Currency risks

The fund may invest in assets denominated in a foreign currency. Changes in the rate of exchange may have an adverse effect on prices and incomes.

Operational risks and custody risks

The fund is subject to risks due to operational or human errors, which can arise at the investment company, the custodian bank, a custodian or other third parties.
