Monthly Market Review

In March, Chinese equity markets posted a limited decline of -0.82% (MBCN1A Index). China and Hong Kong markets remained broadly steady in March, with the Hang Seng (HSI Index), MSCI China (MXCN Index), and Hang Seng Tech (HSTECH Index) increasing by 0.64%, 0.81%, and 1.41% respectively, bolstered by strength in the Materials (precious and non-ferrous metals) and Communications Services sectors. However, MSCI Hong Kong (MXHK Index) declined by -6.50% as initial gains following the removal of property stamp duty were offset by weak Financial and Property results.

Several key catalysts emerged during the month. The National People's Congress (NPC) headlines were generally as expected or slightly better, including a 2024 GDP growth target of approximately 5%, a "new quality productivity" initiative, an "old-swapping-new" scheme for selected equipment and appliances, and a multi-year special sovereign bond issuance plan. Fourth quarter 2023 results revealed strong performances from index-heavy internet companies, due to cost-cutting led margin expansion and improved shareholder return plans, including higher payouts and buybacks. January-February data was also in line or better than expectations.

However, tensions between the US and China escalated, with the introduction of more bills in the US Congress aimed at limiting US investments in China, a new Treasury sanction, and a new ban on selected semiconductor tools to China.

In terms of sectors, Materials outperformed due to rising copper prices and Chalco's Q4 2023 earnings, which were driven by cost savings. Consumer Discretionary also outperformed, fuelled by a rally of AI-themed media companies and a rebound in auto and auto parts sales data. Industrials recorded strong performance, with battery companies CATL and Sungrow exceeding fourth quarter 2023 results expectations, and construction machinery rebounding due to increased policy support for the property market. Conversely, Real Estate faced continuous pressure as new residential home sales declined 24.8% in volume terms and fell 32.7% year-on-year in value terms, with house price declines widening in January-February.

A-shares' average daily turnover recovered from approximately RMB 0.9 trillion in February to around RMB 1 trillion in March. Current market debates are primarily focused on the sustainability of China's macro data after strong numbers in January and February, and the potential timing of China's implementation of Quantitative Easing (QE). Regarding stock connect, Southbound net inflow accelerated to RMB 79 billion in March from RMB 22 billion in February, while Northbound net inflow decelerated to RMB 22 billion in March from RMB 61 billion in February. A-share's margin financing balance as a percentage of A-share market cap remained largely flat at 2.2% at the end of March, while gross margin buys as a percentage of A-share fell to 8% at the end of March from 9% at the end of February.
