FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTS

Market review

In July, the decline in bond yields in key global markets continued as the spread of the delta variant influence recovery prospect especially in east Asia. Irrespective of inflation acceleration, major central banks tend to look at price momentum as transitory and tapering of QE programs is not on the table. A change of ECB's monetary policy framework send additional dovish "low for long" type of signal to markets. In the CEE region, the past weeks have brought a tightening of monetary policy in Hungary (by 30bp to 1,2%) and the Czech Republic (by 25bp to 0,75%). Despite hikes and notwithstanding a significant increase in inflation in Poland (to 5% y/y) the government bond yields fell during July due to the mood in global bond markets. The CNB and the MNB have made it clear that their interest rates will continue to rise. In case of Poland, we expect the first-rate hike at the end of this year. Romanian central bank kept its key interest rate unchanged but tightening of money market liquidity conditions is in the pipeline. Across the region, there is a continuing accumulation of inflationary risks, which are related to both strong pent-up demand and supply chain disruptions.

Portfolio activity

Total return of the fund in July was -0,67% and +0,09% YTD. As in the previous month, the performance was driven by FX weakening of HUF and PLN. Increase of short CZ/HU yields in response to tightening of two CEE central banks had also small immediate negative impact. We closed small OW FX positions on CZK and HUF. Underweighted PLN FX position is kept due to the ongoing non-fundamentally driven dovishness of the Polish central bank and ROMGB duration position is slightly overweighted.

Outlook

Price pressures in the world economy remain present and the upward trend in risk-free yields should prevail for the rest of the year. For the rest of 2021, a lot is priced in by HU/CZ short GBs' markets and we have neutral outlook. We remain moderately underweight in POLGBs as the inflation dynamics will force Polish central bank to act sooner or later. We expect both global and CEE FX to remain supported by decent valuation, risk-on environment, hawkish monetary policies, and high dynamics of growth.
