As at: 20/01/2016

The presented charts and tables concerning performance are based on our own calculations according to the gross performance (BVI) method<sup>8</sup> and illustrate past development. Future results may vary both positively and negatively. The BVI method takes into account all costs incurred at the fund level (e.g. management fees), the net performance and the issue fee. Additional individual costs may be incurred at the customer level (e.g. custodian fees, commission and other charges). Model calculation (net): an investor wishes to purchase shares for Euro 1,000. With a maximum issue surcharge of 0.00%, he has to spend a one-off amount of Euro 0.00 when making the purchase. In addition, there may be custodian costs that reduce performance. The custodian costs are decided by your bank's price list and service charges. Information regarding past development is not a reliable indicator of future performance.

Monthly Commentary

In December the international markets were characterized by underperformance and weakness in local currencies as well as in Euro. Europe – especially Germany – lost during the reporting period approximately 5 per cent. Only Switzerland remained unchanged. Anyway, viewing the whole last year, the German stock market gained 10 per cent. In 2014 the increase was 3 per cent only. Again critical were oil and commodity prices, which fell sharply at the beginning of the month. Oil reached a seven-year-low and commodity enterprises reduced outlooks and manpower significant. Surprisingly the falling oil price did not refresh the atmosphere of the market; on the contrary the mood is even gloomier. Also burdening were the continuing concerns regarding the High-Yield-Sector. Anyway the stock markets showed a mild reaction only on the interest increase of the Federal Reserve Bank (Fed) for the first time in nearly a decade. After this topic had been long and intensively discussed during the last months the increase was not really a surprise. The Fed imply that the four quarter-point increase of December was the start of a gradually rise of rates, keeping an eye on the development of the inflation before deciding about the next raise of rates. Currently the market calculates less increases and a lower final interest level as expected by the Fed. In addition the development in the US was mixed. The ISM purchase manager index dropped under 50. The producing industry is still weak but the large booming service sectors were also hit. After the European Central Bank disappointed investors with its interest rate policy, US shares fell sharply – more than during the last two month. Significant were also the losses at the European stock markets where investors had expected more from the ECB than a reduction of the minimum reserve rate (-0.3%) and an unchanged base rate in height of 0.05%. The Central Bank of Japan is very confident regarding the future economic development of the country. The latest economic data show a partial recovery of the market. For the first time since seven month the imports of Japan increased. The government sees a positive trend by increasing consumer spending and higher earnings. Anyway, the Bank of Japan worries that the weakness of the emerging market will also influence Japan. Therefore further monetary easing is scheduled. The international monetary fund classified China in December as fifth world reserve currency. Anyway Chinese exports dropped more than expected with 6.8% but imports were better than expected -8.7%. Consumer prices increased slightly 1.5%. Production prices decreased 6%. Altogether Chinese figures regarding industrial production and retail turnovers were with 6.2% and 11.2% pleasing. The remaining Asiatic countries also offered an inhomogeneous picture during the reporting period. The industrial production of Korea decreased compared to last year, but India exceeded the expectations by reaching a surplus in height of 9.8%.

Investment Approach

Due to its positioning as a balanced fund, asset weightings depend on the person in charge assessment of the various markets future prospects. Depending on its structure, the fund may therefore have very different risk profiles (see chart below). In buying into the fund, investors obtain a flexible investment vehicle that can take account of both the upside potential of equities and the income aspect of fixed-interest securities. The flexibility in the choice of asset classes is linked to the targeted selection of securities with a focus on high-value, first-rate companies, i.e. companies that have solid assets and balance sheets that may also offer the opportunity of attractive dividend yields.
