Outlook

- Despite the volatile rates and geopolitical environment, markets have ended the first quarter on a positive note.
- We are now at an interesting juncture where economic data in the US remains far more resilient than the broader global economy, pointing to a risk that the Fed will be unable to meet the market's projections for interest rate cuts this year.
- Despite these risks, we believe the case for EM debt in 2024 remains strong.
- At the sovereign index level, the fiscal budget deficit is likely to narrow marginally for all EM countries as a whole, while EM credit markets remain supported by a falling default rate, and overall levels of yield still remain at attractive levels compared to history.
- Local markets remain more nuanced, however the general trend of falling inflation and high nominal yields should still provide a supportive backdrop for total returns, but we do expect some volatility as various dynamics play out.

Past performance does not predict future returns. The return of your investment may increase or decrease as a result of currency fluctuations if your investment is made in a currency other than that used in the past performance calculation. Fees and other expenses will have a negative effect on investment returns. Performance shown for 1 year periods onwards are annualised figures.

Important risk considerations

- At times, the market for emerging market bonds may dry up, which could make it difficult to sell these bonds, or the fund may only be able to sell them at a discount.
- There may be cases where an organisation with which we trade assets or derivatives (usually a financial institution such as a bank) may be unable to fulfil its obligations, which could cause losses to the fund.
- Investing in emerging market bonds offers you the chance to gain higher returns through growing your capital and generating income. Nevertheless, there is a greater risk that the organization which issued the bond will fail, which would result in a loss of income to the fund along with its initial investment.
- Emerging markets may be more volatile and it could be harder to sell or trade these bonds. There may be less government supervision, legal regulation and less well-defined tax laws and procedures than in countries with more developed trading markets. Emerging markets can be particularly sensitive to political instability, which can result in greater volatility and uncertainty, subjecting the fund to the risk of losses.
- RBC BlueBay could suffer from a failure of its processes, systems and controls – or from such a failure at an organisation on which we rely in order to deliver our services – which could lead to losses for the fund.

Notes

- While gross of fees figures would reflect the reinvestment of all dividends and earnings, it would not reflect the deduction of investment management and performance fees. An investor's returns will be reduced by the deduction of applicable fees which will vary with the rate of return on the strategy. For example, if there was an annualised return of 10% over a 5-year period then the compounding effect of a 0.60% management fee and a 0.20% performance fee would reduced the annualised return to 9.32% (figures used are only to demonstrate the effect of charges are not an indicator of future performance). In addition the typical fees and expenses charged to a strategy will offset the strategy's trading profits. A description of the specific fee structure for each BlueBay strategy is contained in the strategy's prospectus.
- Risk statistics are annualised and calculated using weekly data points since inception. Risk statistics will be produced once there are 3 complete months of data available; for meaningful results, a minimum sample of 36 data points is recommended and where history is less than 3 years caution should be taken with the interpretation and representation of this data. Returns for periods less than 1 year have not been annualised in accordance with current industry standard reporting practices.
- Fundamental ESG risk rating is assigned at an issuer level by BlueBay. Categories range from 'very high' ESG risk rating to 'very low' ESG risk rating and is a function of the ESG risk profile of an issuer and how will it manages these risks.
- Investment ESG score is assigned at an issuer level by BlueBay unless otherwise stated (i.e. assigned at the security level). Scores range from '+3' through to '-3' and indicates the extent to which ESG is considered investment materials, as well as the nature and scale of the materiality impact (i.e. positive credit impact, negative credit impact, no credit impact).
